TAUBER'S DUBLIN VISIT
NEW SONGS IN HIS PROGRAMME

Selections from the lyrics of "Paganini" will be sung in English for the first time by Richard Tauber, the distinguished operatic tenor, at the Celebrity Concert in the Theatre Royal, Dublin, to-day.

The second notable artist appearing at the concert is Susan Sliviko, the celebrated young pianist. Both artists, accompanied by Richard Tauber's secretary, arrived from England yesterday evening, and, despite depressing weather, were looking forward to their Dublin and Cork visits with pleasant anticipation.

Mr. Tauber, whose second visit it is to Dublin, has been singing opera in his native Vienna for the past six weeks, following tours in Egypt and England. Next month he will sing A. P. Herbert's English version of "Paganini" with Evelyn Laye, at the Lyceum Theatre, London, and he told an Irish Times reporter that he will sing some of the lyrics in English for the first time to-day. He will also sing pieces by Schubert and Schumann, and two serious classical opera arias, one of which is the great aria from "Lohengrin." He intends to do further film work in the autumn.

HOSPICE FOR THE DYING
A special appeal for funds will be made on behalf of Our Lady's Hospice for the Dying, Harold's Cross, at all the Masses in the Carmelite Church, Whitefriar street, Dublin, to-morrow.

SANDFORD PARISH CHURCH
A parade Service of the Boy Scouts and Girl Guides of Sandford Parish will be held in Sandford Church to-morrow evening. The preacher will be the Rev. Robert J. Ross, M.A., Headmaster of Christ Church Cathedral School.

WEDDINGS
MR. C. E. ABELL AND MISS D. E. SCULLY.
The wedding took place yesterday at St. Mary's Church, Blessington, of Mr. Charles Edmund Abell, A.M.I.E.E., Mech., of Ronkswood, Worcester, and Miss Dorothy Eileen Doreen Scully, younger daughter of the Rev. W. Reeves Scully and Mrs. Scully, of The Rectory, Blessington.

His Grace the Archbishop of Dublin officiated at the ceremony, and was assisted by the bride's father. The church was decorated with spring flowers and greenery by Mrs. Scott Moore and Mrs. T. S. Porter.

Mr. N. R. Scully gave away his sister. She wore a graceful gown of saxe blue crêpe satin, with a blue picture hat trimmed with flowers, and she carried a bouquet of pink roses.

There was one bridesmaid, Miss Noel Scully, who wore a suit of sapphire, blue wool crêpe, with a straw hat to match, and carried a bouquet of crimson carnations.

Mr. Arnold Webb acted as best man.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the Rectory by the bride's mother, who wore a navy blue silk dress, with a becoming coat and hat to match.

In the afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Abell left for London en route for Italy and Switzerland, the bride wearing a beige coat and skirt, with a hat to match and a silver fox fur.

The bridesmaid's ensemble by R. A. Seaman, Wicklow street.

MR. A. H. K. ROBERTS AND MISS I. JOHNSTONE
Yesterday morning, Mr. Alexander H. K. Roberts, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Scott-Roberts, of Northfield, Elton Park, Sandycove, Co. Dublin, was married to Miss Irene Johnstone, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Johnstone, Bank of Ireland House, Mullingar, at St. Paul's Church, Glenageary.

The Service was conducted by the Rev. G. T. Berry, of Mullingar, who was assisted by Canon D. H. Hall. The Rev. Edwin Owen was at the organ.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a pretty travelling suit in two shades of green, with a small hat to match, and a silver fox fur.

There was one bridesmaid—Miss Daphne Johnstone, sister of the bride—who wore a rose-pink velour coat and a straw picture hat, lined and trimmed with rose-pink to match her coat.

Mr. Angus W. Young acted as best man.

After the ceremony the bride's parents entertained a few friends at the Marine Hotel, Dún Laoghaire. The bride's mother wore a green marocain gown, a green coat trimmed with a mink collar, and a hat to match.

The bridegroom's mother wore a brown marocain dress, and a coat of Indian lamb, with a squirrel collar.

During the morning Mr. and Mrs. Roberts left for France, the bride wearing a travelling coat to match her costume.

The bride's costume and coat were supplied by Madame Josephine, Nassau street.

STATUS OF WOMEN
LETTER TO MINISTER FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS
The following is a copy of a letter sent to the Minister for External Affairs by the National Council of Women of Ireland :—

"DEAR SIR,—It has been called to our attention by the International Council of Women (with which this Council is affiliated) that the Irish Free State Government has not yet replied to the inquiry being made by the League of Nations under the Equal Rights Treaty, 1933, into the civil and political status of women.

"Having regard to the fact that this question is on the agenda of this year's Assembly and that Government reports should reach Geneva by June 1st, we earnestly beg that you will send your reply as soon as possible, so that the consideration of this matter may come before the League Assembly without further delay or postponement.

"I am, sir, on behalf of my Committee, yours truly,

"LUCY O. KINGSTON, Hon. Sec."

ABBEY EXPERIMENTAL THEATRE
NEW IRISH PLAYS
The Abbey Experimental Theatre opens its first season on April 5th, at the Peacock Theatre, Dublin, with two new plays. "Aiarm Among the Clerks," a three-act play by Mervyn Wall, is illustrative of the drudgery of the office life which forms the background for an exciting plot. This play, produced by Cecil Ford, will be preceded by "The Phœnix," a one-act play by N. O. B., produced by Frank Carney. "The Phœnix" deals with the last chapter of Oliver Goldsmith's difficult life in Trinity College, and with his romantic, if undignified, departure therefrom. The settings

SLIGO FEIS CEOIL CONCLUDED

GOOD SINGING OF PLAIN-SONG

DUBLIN PLAYERS' DAY

DOUBLE SUCCESSES IN PIANO AND VIOLIN

FROM OUR REPORTER.

SLIGO, Friday.

THE feature of the morning session of the Sligo Feis Ceoil to-day was the dual success of a young Dublin player, Miss Marie Lillis-Condron, in the violin classes. She won both the silver cup for advanced playing and the silver cup for senior violin, in both cases giving a talented performance. Her playing suggested the maturity of a much older and more widely experienced player, and she should undoubtedly go far, though Mr. Godfrey Brown rather thought the future career of a violinist was "tremendous slavery," or, as he put it, "like entering into the marriage state—not to be entered into lightly or ill-advisedly."

There was also good playing in the junior piano classes, and here again there was a dual winner, Miss Bee Brennan, of Seaview terrace, Ailesbury road, Dublin, winning the Pigott Cup and winning, with her brother, Master Louis Brennan, the Jean Wilson Memorial Cups for junior piano duet.

The following were the awards:—

Silver Cup, for violin playing. Competitors to play two pieces of own selection. There were four competitors. The cup was won by Miss Marie Lillis Condron, 133 Attracta road, Cabra, Dublin, with 91 marks, the runner-up being Mr. Michael Heinrich Koss, Castle street, Sligo, with 90 marks.

Mr. Godfrey Browne (adjudicator) said the winner had given a very finished performance. Her tone and intonation were both good, and the bowing excellent. She was most promising, and should make a good violinist. The young man who was runner-up had also given a most creditable performance. There was here, too, finished playing with a good mentality, but there was faulty intonation here and there. Probably the change over from viola to violin had affected his stopping. He should also play more with the middle of the bow, and not the heel, or top.

Senior Violin. Test pieces: "Sonata in G minor" (third movement) (Tartini). Piece at sight.—1, Miss Marie Lillis-Condron, 133 Attracta road, Cabra, Dublin (104); Mr. Barry Ward, Chapel street, Sligo, was second with 96 points, but having been first in this class in 1934 and 1935 he was disqualified, and the second prize was awarded to Miss Mary Walsh, Arran street, Ballina, with 89 marks.

Mr. Godfrey Browne said that there was more difficulty in playing this Tartini piece than in playing many of the showy sonatas one heard. This piece required brains and a trained musical mind. The young girl who was first prize-winner had given them a really talented performance. She was a matured and highly trained player, and her work was of a highly-trained player, and her work was of a much older person, with more ripened mind. He felt that she had a "future," if she was prepared to go on and do the tremendous slavery that the violin as a career demanded. The young man who came second was quite good, but had shown lapses in intonation—strangely enough, in the more simple passages.

CUPS FOR PIANO-PLAYING

Jean Wilson Memorial Cups for Junior Piano Duet—Test: "Festzug" (Jensen), "Reigen" (Jensen). The Cups were won by Miss Bee and Master Louis Brennan, Seaview terrace, Ailesbury road, Dublin, with 88 marks; Misses Mary and Anna O'Malley, Shop street, Westport, being second, with 80 marks.

Mr. Godfrey Brown said that the winners had made a good start, their playing was bright and cheerful, and throughout the two minds worked together as one.

The Pigott Cup for Junior Pianoforte playing, open to competitors between 10 and 13 years of age.—Test pieces: "Minuetto and Trio" (from "Sonata in E") (Haydn), "Gavotte" (from "French Suite," No. 5) (Bach), and sight test. The Cup was won by Bee Brennan, Seaview terrace, Ailesbury road, Dublin, 97 marks; 2, Joan Killick, Florence road, Bray, County Wicklow, 95 marks.

Mr. Godfrey Brown said that the class was good, and played the test pieces creditably. The pieces were more difficult than they looked or sounded. The winner showed a fine grasp of both test pieces, and her playing was fluent, the time in both cases being just right, but she was disappointing in her sight reading. The little girl who came second played rather hurriedly, but she had good fingers, and was most intelligent. This was evident in the sight test, where she got nine out of ten marks.

Junior Duet in Irish—1, Maeve O'Connell and Bridie O'Connell, Convent of Mercy, Sligo, 81 marks; 2, Anna Connolly and Doreen Fitzpatrick, Convent of Mercy, Sligo, 79 marks; highly commended, Bridie Connolly and Dymnna Waters, 74 marks; Maud Smyth and Eileen Kelly, 73 marks—all of the Convent of Mercy, Sligo.

Violin Duet (Junior), with piano accompaniment, Test pieces: "Gondellied" (Mendelssohn); "Rondo alla Turca" (Mazas)—1, Mary O'Mally and Anna O'Mally, Shop street, Westport, Co. Mayo, 164 marks; 2, Frances Walsh and Philomena Mayler, Loreto Convent, Omagh, 161 marks; very highly commended, Maureen Harrington, "Leoville," Sligo, and Eithne Flattery, "Aileach," Sligo, 160 marks.

Senior Accompanying at Sight—1, Miss M. Griffiths, Sandymount, Dublin; very highly commended, Miss Audrey Tomkin, Foxrock, Co. Dublin.

Irish School Choirs (Unison)—1, Nazareth House Baby Boys' Choir; 2, St. Laurence's School, Convent of Mercy, Sligo.

Junior Quick Practice—1, Miss Hetty Wall, Collooney, 85 marks; 2, Patrick Henry Regan, Belcoo, Co. Fermanagh, 84 marks.

Junior Any Song (Irish)—1, Seamus Horan, Lugnagal National School, Co. Sligo, 82 marks; 2, Aileen Harte, Convent of Mercy, Sligo, 80 marks; highly commended, Olivia Phibbs, Coolaney, Co. Sligo, 79 marks. Bridie Coyle, St. Louis Convent, Kiltimagh, secured 88 marks, but was disqualified, as she had won first prize last year.

PLAIN-SONG

Sarto Memorial medal—Test-pieces: "J Adoro Te Salve Regina" and "O Cor Mariæ," from the Holy Ghost Hymnal. There were only two competitors—1, St. Anne's Choir, Ursuline Convent, Sligo, 98 marks; 2, Nazareth House Boys' Choir, Sligo, 95 marks.

The Very Rev. John Burke, Dean of University College, Dublin, who adjudicated, said that the standard of both choirs was exceedingly high. The winners had lovely tone; their words were excellent, and their rhythm good, though inclined to be syllabic at times. Their singing was prayerful and beautiful in its simplicity and sincerity. They were a splendidly trained choir. The second choir were also very excellent, and their singing was well balanced, impressive, and restrained for boys. There was a little irregularity in the rhythm.

Connaught Perpetual Cup—There was only one competitor—St. Anne's Choir, Sligo—who were awarded 90 marks.

Dean Burke said that their singing was prayerful, the tone good, and the rhythm excellent.

Speaking on the development of plain-song, Dean Burke said that no real progress would ever be made until all those who had rehearsals outside found their way within the precincts of the church during its Liturgical Services, more especially at the celebration of the Mass. That alone was the one motive — the extension of plain-song to its proper place and into the actual service of the sanctuary within its actual walls. He expressed the pleasure he felt at being invited to hear such beautiful singing of plain-song by all these children's choirs, and he congratulated their teacher, and also thanked the organisers of the feis for including these competitions in their festival.

Archdeacon McCormack Cup, for Irish school choirs, two-part—Test-pieces: "Maire Beile Atha Lamhrais" and a piece of own selection. Two entries. The Cup was won by St. Vincent's National School, Ursuline Convent, Sligo (91 marks); 2, St. Laurence Choir, Convent of Mercy, Sligo.

Mr. Seamus Clandillon, adjudicator, said that he was very pleased that these choirs were maintaining the very high standard of choral singing which the Sligo Feis had set for itself over some years now. The tone of both these choirs was beautiful, and there was none of that distressing screeching which one heard in other parts of the country.

DANCING

Junior Four-hand Reel (Boys)—1, Nazareth House No. 2 Troupe, Sligo, 86 marks; 2, Nazareth House No. 1 Troupe, Sligo, 85 marks.

Junior Four-hand Reel (Girls)—1, Monsie Connolly's No. 2 Troupe (Connolly School of Dancing, Sligo), 89 marks; 2, St. Lawrence's Troupe, Convent of Mercy, Sligo, 88 marks; 3, St. Louis's Troupe (O'Donoghue School of Dancing), St. Louis Convent, Dundoran, 87 marks.

Intermediate Hornpipe—1, May Rennick (Conlon School of Dancing, Sligo), 91 marks; 2, Rosina McManus (O'Donohoe School of Dancing), St. Louis Convent, Bundoran, 90 marks; 3, Annie Dorrian, Bishop street, Ballyshannon, 89 marks; very highly commended, May Gillespie, Market Yard, Ballyshannon, and Kathleen Flaherty (O'Donohoe School of Dancing, St. Louis Convent, Bundoran, 88 marks each.

Junior Three-hand Reel—1, St. Louis Troupe (O'Donohoe School of Dancing), St. Louis Convent, Bundoran, 89 marks; 2, Miss Baby Conlon's No. 1 Troupe (Conlon School of Dancing), 88 marks; very highly commended, Miss Conlon's No. 1 Troupe, Sligo, and St. Lawrence's Troupe, St. Lawrence School, Convent of Mercy, Sligo, 87 marks each.

Intermediate Reel—1, Teresa McTiernan (Conlon School of Dancing, Sligo), 92 marks; 2, Anna Dorrian, Sligo, 91 marks; 3, Sylvia Reilly (O'Donohoe School of Dancing, Ballyshannon)) and May Gillespie, Market Yard, Ballyshannon, tied with 90 marks each; very highly commended, Kathleen Flaherty and Rosina McManus (O'Donohoe School of Dancing), St. Louis Convent, Bundoran, 89 marks each.

Fairy Reel (Boys)—1, No. 2 Troupe, Nazareth House, Sligo, 87 marks; very highly commended, No. 1 Troupe, 86 marks, and No. 3 Troupe, Nazareth House, Sligo, 85 marks.

CUP FOR SOLO SINGING

Silver Cup for Solo Singing. Competitors were free to select any song, and were judged by four members of the audience. The Class, with twenty entries, proved to be a capital one. The cup was won by Miss Moira Griffith, Linton House, Strand road, Sandymount, Dublin, with 91 marks; 2nd, Miss Binkie Flood, 123 South Circular road, Dublin, 89 marks; 3rd, Master Claude Robertson, Bank House, Bandon, County Cork, 88 marks.

Violin (Sight Reading)—1, Miss Kathleen Costello, O'Connell street, Sligo, 160 marks; 2, Michael Heinrich Koss, Castle street, Sligo, 157 marks.

Mr. Chamberlain said that the piece selected had not presented many difficulties in rhythm, but each competitor had failed in counting the requisite number of beats.

Girls' Solo Singing. Competitors under 17.—Test pieces, "A Hammock Song" (S. Dickson), "The Piper" (Thiman)—1, Olive J. Briggs, 5 Lincoln avenue, Belfast, 176 marks; 2, Ita Flynn, 11 William street, Sligo, 166 marks; 3, Annie Feehily, Strandhill, Co. Sligo.

INSTRUMENTAL TRIO

Instrumental Trio (Elementary). Test piece, "Trio in F" (Klengel), for Violin, Violoncello and Piano—1, Miss Phelan, Miss Collins and Mr. J. P. McNamara, Kiltimagh, County Mayo, 84 marks; 2, Miss Olga Burns, Miss Ita Flynn, and Miss Peggy Howley, Sligo, 83 marks; highly commended, Miss May Doorley, Miss Maura Horan, and Miss Sheila Hurley, Ursuline Convent, Sligo.

Mr. Chamberlain said that he was pleased to find the trio work of such a high standard. The winning trio had faults, especially in intonation lapses; but generally it had given the best performance. The second trio was not so good together, and he would have liked to hear the piano give a clearer definition of the rhythm. After all, the piano, with its choral basses, should set the general rhythm flow, beat and accent, without becoming too prominent.

Boys' Solo. Test pieces: "Across the Sea" (Rowley), "The Countryman" (Warlock). Six entries—1, St. Martin Claude Robertson, Bank House, Bandon, County Cork, 170 marks; 2, Desmond Parker, 9 Knappagh road, Sligo, 169 marks.

Mr. Chamberlain said that the winner had given an artistic performance and he had a strong musical sense.

Mr. F. Locke, of Limerick, the only competitor in the special Vocal Solo (male) competition, secured 75 marks and was recommended for a prize.

Intermediate Violin Solo. Test pieces: (a) air arranged (W. H. Reed, J. Battishill); (b) "Humoreske" (No. 2 Op., "Pieces Faciles" (G. Walenn); and (c) sight test—1, Marie de Vere, Ballina, 97 marks; 2, Eithne Flattery, Sligo, 94 marks; 3, Frances Walsh, Ballina, 93 marks.

Studied Piano Accompaniment. Silver cup—Won outright by Miss Ita Guy, Tuam, County Galway, 92 marks; 2, Miss Audrey Tomkin, Foxrock, County Dublin, 90 marks.

The Feis concluded with a prize-winners' concert, the audience crowding the Gilhooly Hall.

BRITISH SAILORS' SOCIETY

WORK EXPLAINED AT DUBLIN MEETING

An address on the work of the Ladies' Guilds of the British Sailors' Society was given by the Organising Secretary, Miss F. R. Parker, at a meeting under the auspices of the Dublin Sailors' Rest, in the Presbyterian House, St. Stephen's Green, Dublin, last night. For many years, she said, the first call on the funds of the society had been for the relief of distress owing to the unemployment in shipping. The changing character of the various ports led to constant change and activity by the society. Recently they had built a hostel at Haifa, in Palestine, which was a rapidly developing port. Southampton was developing at the expense of Liverpool, and in the former city they had opened a hostel as a memorial to Earl Jellico. At Malta merchant seamen seldom slept ashore nowadays, and the demand was for a club for boys.

Having mentioned other places where the society had extended its activities recently, Miss Parker said she hoped that the extension of trade in Dublin's port soon would call for an enlargement of their hostel here. She paid a tribute to Miss Perry, the Hon. Secretary of the Dublin Ladies' Guild for twenty years.

Sir Walter H. Boyd, Bart., presided, and a vote of thanks to Miss Parker was passed, on the motion of Miss Perry, seconded by Alderman Hubbard Clark, Hon. Treasurer.

WOULD-BE RESCUERS KILLED

AUSTRIAN PEASANTS BURIED BY AVALANCHE

A Reuter Innsbruck telegram says that while on their way to the rescue of an injured Englishman, Mr. T. A. Henderson, of Chelmsford, Essex, yesterday, two Austrian peasants were caught by an avalanche on the Oetztal Alps (Tyrol) and swept to death.

Mr. Henderson had broken his leg while ski-ing.

LAST NIGHT'S DANCES

THE METROPOLE STAFF

Each year the Metropole Staff dance proves most enjoyable, and last night it seemed to go with even greater swing and gaiety than ever before. A very large number of the staff of the Metropole and allied cinemas were present with their friends, and dancing continued until a late hour. Very attractive souvenirs were presented to guests on arrival, and although the dance is looked forward to by the staff throughout the year, it must have been even better than was anticipated.

Among those present were:—Mr. and Mrs. J. Crowley, Dr. and Mrs. Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Corrigan, Mrs. R. O'Rourke, Miss S. O'Rourke, Superintendent and Mrs. Ennis, Mr. W. Mooney, Miss Mooney, Mrs. Best, Miss M. Dunn, Miss G. Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. J. O'Reilly, Miss V. Brennan, Mrs. M. Ferrally, Mr. and Mrs. S. Dwyer, Mr. and Mrs. D. Mulvaney, Mr. and Mrs. J. O'Toole, Mr. G. Crowley, Mr. and Mrs. F. O'Toole, Mr. and Mrs. G. Rudd, Mr. and Mrs. J. Kane, Mr. P. Clarke, Miss S. Cregan, Mr. and Mrs. L. Burke, Mr. and Mrs. R. Burke.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Wilson, Mr. C. Hackett, Misses M. and L. Geraghty, Miss M. Healy, Mrs. R. Temple, Miss P. Mullins, Mr. R. Crawford, Miss N. Lacy, Mr. and Mrs. J. Flynn, Mr. J. Warfield, Mr. and Mrs. P. Kenny, the Misses G. and A. Gilligan, Mr. J. Gilligan, hon. sec. dance; Mr. A. Fryer, Mr. R. Bolton, the Misses M. and A. Brady, Miss H. Fry, Mr. and Mrs. J. Mackin, Miss L. Gornell, Miss Long, Miss M. Dunn, Mr. M. Wall, Miss A. Doyle, Miss C. Nolan, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lawless, Mrs. Fitzpatrick, Mrs. Wedrick, Mrs. E. O'Brien, Mr. and Mrs. B. Murphy, and Mr. and Mrs. S. Ryan.

McMULLAN BROTHERS, LTD.

A very enjoyable dance was held in the Gresham Hotel, Dublin, last night by Messrs. McMullan Bros., Ltd., petrol and oil distributors. A feature of the evening was a cabaret by the Comerford troupe of Irish dancers, while an additional attraction was an exhibition of Irish step dancing by Miss Aileen O'Reilly, Feis gold medallist. Spot dances and novelties were also included in the programme.

Among those present were:—The Lord Mayor, Mr. William McMullan, Miss Mary M Mullan, Major-General and Mrs. McNeill, Major and Mrs. McMahon, Mr. and Mrs. C. McElligott, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. White, Mr. and Miss O'Driscoll, Mr. J. W. Renton, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Lynch, Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Davies, Mr. and Mrs. Colm Murphy, Mr. T. Peddie, Mr. and Mrs. T. Cleary, Mr. and Mrs. C. Beatty, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. T. P. O'Connor, Mr. and Mrs. Lane, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Ferguson, Mr. and Mrs. Prescott, Miss F. Milling, Mr. C. J. McMullan, Mr. H. A. McLaughlin, Mrs. Mayne and Mrs. Brindley.

BUILDING TRADE DISPUTE

NO CHANGE IN THE POSITION

There was a further disappointment in connection with the building trade truce in the Dublin area yesterday. Efforts to secure a complete resumption of the operatives pending the result of the conference on wages, hours and conditions, which opens on Monday, were unsuccessful.

During the day the Department of Industry and Commerce was in touch with representatives of the Operative Plasterers' Trade Society and the Ancient Guild of Incorporated Brick and Stonelayers, but the discussions did not lead to any change in the position.

It was hoped that an arrangement would be made, which, if ratified by the two grades of workers who are on strike, would lead to a complete resumption on Monday. Work in the building industry was slack yesterday owing to the weather conditions.

The fear that the stoppage would be followed by an exodus of skilled labour in the plastering and other trades was strengthened by the departure yesterday of a number of workers.

A representative of one of the Unions whose members are still at work stated last night that a considerable number of carpenters, painters, builders' labourers, and others will be laid off day by day as a result of the sectional stoppage, which must eventually tie up practically all building contracts.

At several of the mass meetings which have taken place during the last three days the workers have appealed for common action in the dispute. They favour negotiations while all operatives remain at work; careful consideration of any proposals for a permanent settlement, and a complete stoppage if these proposals are rejected.

CONFERENCE IN CORK

Our Cork Correspondent states that the conference arranged by the Ministry for Industry and Commerce in connection with the threatened dispute in the building trade at Cork, will sit in Cork to-day.

IRISH HOUSE OF WHITE CANONS

RESIGNATION OF FOUNDER

The Right Rev. Monsignor Lamy, the Abbot of the well-known Premonstratensian Abbey of Tongerloo, has resigned because of failing health. While he was studying at Floreffe, the philosophical seminary of the Diocese of Namur, a former abbey of the White Canons, as the Premonstratensian Fathers are called in the Low Countries, Abbot Lamy discovered his vocation and followed it. He was ordained in 1905, and studied history for three years at Louvain University. He was Master of Novices at Tongerloo when he was elected Abbot in 1915. Owing to his zeal, the Velle Mission in the Belgian Congo became a Vicariate in 1924, the Premonstratensian Parish at Manchester became a Priory, the Irish House of the Tongerloo White Canons was opened at Kilnacrott, Co. Cavan, and the Abbey of Leffe was started in 1931, with fifteen Canons. Monsignor Lamy became Vicar-General of the Abbeys in Holland and Belgium in 1922, and in 1927 Definitor of the whole Order. In 1929 he witnessed the burning of his abbey. He started the yearly Congresses for the veneration of the Blessed Virgin, and was ever active in fostering retreats of priests and laymen.

SHORTAGE OF METALS

GERMANY'S FOUR-YEAR PLAN

CATERING FOR RE-ARMAMENT

NEW regulations for German iron and steel producers, to come into force on May 1, have been announced by General Goering in the four-year plan, and will have far-reaching effects on German industry, says a Reuter Berlin telegram.

The regulations, which have been issued by Herr Bernard Koehler, head of the office for raw material distribution in the four-year plan, are intended to rule out unnecessary competition between the consumers of iron and steel, and bring consumption into line with the country's capacity for production.

The measure has been made necessary by Germany's increasing shortage of metals necessary for re-armament under the construction schemes of Herr Hitler.

QUOTAS

Definite quotas are allotted to the main branches of German industry in the new scheme.

Within Germany the re-armament industry will be given preferential treatment in obtaining supplies, while second preference will be given to machine construction, mining, shipbuilding, boiler-making and the motor industry.

Further restriction will be placed on the building of private houses, which will virtually bring such building to a stop, with the exception of a few dwellings for workers.

In a statement issued in connection with the new orders Herr Koehler urged that the employers must not allow the new regulations to lead to the dismissal of workers.

CONTROL RESENTED

German industrialists already are seriously concerned by the increasing control under which they are being placed. In some cases firms which have painstakingly accumulated supplies of steel, iron, copper and other raw materials have had their supplies commandeered in whole or in part by the Government, and handed over to competitors whose need was said to be greater or more vital for national purposes.

THE MILLE MIGLIA

BRITISH ENTRY FOR ITALIAN RACE

A Brescia (Northern Italy) Press Association Foreign Special telegram says:—Four nations will be represented in the Mille Miglia, the Italian 1,000 mile race, reputed to be the world's most difficult which takes place starting from here at 1 a.m. to-morrow. Great Britain is represented by Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Wisdom, driving a 2,288 c.c. M.G., and five Frenchmen, including Rene Dreyfus (Delahaye), and one Dutchman, driving a British Aston-Martin, are also competing.

The rest of the entry of 150 are Italians, who are making a great effort, chiefly with Fiats and Alfa-Romeos, to win this event, which to them is the greatest of the international season. Among them are the Scureria Ferrari team of Alfa-Romeo drivers; Giuseppe Farina and C. Pintacuda, who were second and third respectively last year, and Clemente Biondetti.

An interesting entry is that of Vittorio Mussolini, eldest son of the Duce, who will drive a Fiat with Captain Vitalini. Vittorio is a crack driver, as well as a skilled air pilot. The usual figure eight course will be followed and the race will not finish until late at night.

Starting from Brescia, the drivers go to Bologna, then southwards to Florence, Siena and Rome. From Rome they strike north to the Adriatic coast at Ancona, then by way of Pesaro back to Bologna, from there on to Venice, Verona, and back to the starting point, Brescia.

Many of the Italian cars will run on "national petrol," which is a mixture of ordinary petrol and home-produced fuel. Foreign drivers will be able to use their own choice of fuel.

PRIESTS FOR MEXICO

A NEW SEMINARY

A large seminary wherein priests will be trained for work in the Mexican Missions will shortly be launched at Las Vegas, New Mexico. The new seminary, which is situated on a magnificent property, some five miles outside the town of Las Vegas, has been built to counteract the laws which forbid the maintenance and operation of seminaries in the country south of the Rio Grande. While some education for the clergy is still being carried on there, it is only accomplished under grave difficulties, and is subject to continual interruptions through raids by the police and soldiers when the secret places of instruction are discovered. The new seminary, which is being called the "Montezuma Seminary," is intended to rectify this evil, and when completed it will be America's own counterpart to such great historic clerical institutions of Europe as Douai, Salamanca, and similar seminaries. When completed the buildings will accommodate 500 students at a time. This seminary, which has been made possible through the good offices of the American Bishops, will afford Mexican aspirants to the priesthood a place of rest and order, where, safe across the border in New Mexico, they can pursue their studies free from interruption.

LITTLE FLOWER PILGRIMAGE

An international pilgrimage has reached Rome, to celebrate the coming of the Little Flower to Rome fifty years ago, and to walk in the footsteps of the saint during her week's sojourn: She stayed at the Southern Hotel with her father and her sister Celine. The room she occupied is now turned into an oratory, which contains the veil and badge she wore at her audience with Pope Leo XIII. The pilgrims will visit St. Agnes Outside the Walls, where the Roman saint of the Sixth Century gave a keepsake to the little saint of the Twentieth Century. There will be Mass in the Vatican garden, before the little house where the saint is venerated, a short distance from the Hall of the Consistory, where the great soul of the child prayed to God for strength in the trial which awaited her in her future life.

CORK DISTRICT MILK BOARD

The following have been appointed to constitute the Cork District Milk Board:—Chairman, Mr. Martin Mullally, Drangan, Co. Tipperary. Other members—Mr. D. Lehane, Castletreasure, Douglas; Mr. E. P. Linehan, Ballinahina, Carrignavar; Mr. M. J. Corry, T.D. Sunville, Glounthane; Mr. J. Young, Belvedere, Lehenagh; Mr. W. M. O'Keeffe, Ringmahon road, Blackrock; Mr. E. B. Stanley, Richmond Dairy, 138 Lower Glanmire road, Cork; Mr. James Mullane, Fair Hill, Cork, and Mr. Eugene O'Riordan, Cork Farmers' Co-Operative Milk Emporium, Ltd., 44 Sheares street, Cork.

THAT 'DRAWN THE FAVOURITE' FEELING

It's nice to be "sitting pretty." It's nice to feel well ahead in happiness. Life's troubles have a way of trailing off into the background when one has £30,000 to bank on. Well, big money will soon go to many subscribers in the Derby Draw. YOU may be one of the lucky ones if you secure a ten shilling ticket ..... in good time.

Last day for receiving subscriptions for the Derby, May 7th. Draw will take place on the 28th May. Race will be run on the 2nd June, 1937.

SUNDAY LICENSING HOURS

APPLICATIONS AT BRAY COURT

The annual applications for the extension up to 9 p.m. during the summer months of the hours during which the sale of liquor is permitted on Sundays came before the Bray District Court yesterday. Mr. L. Price, District Justice, refused the Bray applications, granted those from Enniskerry, and adjourned those from Greystones.

Superintendent O'Reilly stated that, as there was no extension in Lucan or Howth, people with undue thirsts came to Bray and Enniskerry, where there had been a large increase in drunkenness and disorderly conduct. In Bray the drunk and disorderly cases increased from one in the summer of 1935 to eight in the summer of 1936, and simple drunkenness cases from none to nine. Already extensions had been refused for Lucan this year, and he anticipated a refusal for Howth also. The Superintendent said that the licensees in Enniskerry gave the Guards every assistance. Of the nineteen publicans in Bray only nine had applied for an extension.

Sergeant Deignan, Enniskerry, in reply to Mr. James Magee, solicitor, who appeared for the applicants, said that the number of convictions for drunkenness was extraordinarily small, having regard to the huge number of visitors to the district on Sundays in the summer.

Mr. Price said the increase in drunkenness in Bray was remarkable.

THE DOG'S FAULT

"Why did you not pay your licence?"

This question was addressed to virtually all of the 124 persons who were prosecuted at Bray District Court yesterday for being in possession of unlicensed dogs. The following were some of the replies:—

"Because the dog was in bad health."

"Because I had no money."

"I never pay before the end of March."

"This dog has been licensed for almost twenty years and I am entitled to a refund."

"My dog is so old it should have a pension."

"The Guards should notify dog-owners when their licence renewals are due."

"This really isn't my dog."

But probably fifty per cent of the defendants said: "I had forgotten about it."

OBITUARY

MR. PATRICK J. O'NEILL

Rowing enthusiasts in Dublin and Cork will regret the death of Mr. Patrick J. O'Neill, which occurred at his residence, the Vernon Hotel, Dublin, on Wednesday last, at the age of 58. Mr. O'Neill was a native of Cahireiveen, where he received his education, and he began his business career in Cork. While in Cork he rowed for the Lee Rowing Club, and won a number of trophies. He came to Dublin and joined the staff of Messrs. Todd Burns and Co., whom he left for Messrs. Clery, O'Connell street. In 1916 he joined the staff of Messrs. Millar and Beatty, with whom he spent over twenty years, and became manager of the carpet department. In Dublin Mr. O'Neill carried on his rowing activities, and joined the Commercial Rowing Club, for which he helped to win the Senior Fours Championship in 1902. He later became a member of the Irish Amateur Rowing Union and a member of the Metropolitan Regatta Council. He is survived by his wife.

G.A.A. AND PRESIDENT DE VALERA

PROTEST RUMOUR DENIED

Mr. P. O'Caoimh, General Secretary of the Gaelic Athletic Association, has written to President de Valera, stating that he has been requested by the Mayo County Board to deny the statement published in an English paper, to the effect that the Mayo Board had requested the Central Council to make a protest to Mr. de Valera because he had received representatives of the Yogoslav Association Football team at Government Buildings. No such resolution, he added, was discussed by the Mayo Board.

EXPORT BOUNTY ON CALF SKINS

With a view to avoiding any misunderstanding in the matter, the Department of Agriculture desires to draw the particular attention of farmers and other interested persons to the fact that calf skins, to be eligible for bounty under this year's bounty scheme, must have the complete portion of the right foreleg, from the knee joint down, naturally attached.

FREE STATE EGG-LAYING TEST

REPORT FOR SIXTH PERIOD

The sixth report issued by the Department of Agriculture in connection with the current egg-laying test at the Munster Institute, Cork, covers the period from 1st October to 17th March. It states that during the sixth period of four weeks the general health of the birds was satisfactory, and that production showed a steady increase.

Excluding eggs which were under the weight prescribed for second grade, and making allowance for the death of twenty-four pullets since the commencement of the test, the average egg yield per pullet for each of the competing breeds was as follows:—

Breed.	No. of Pullets.	Sixth Period (Feb. 18-Mar. 17)	24 weeks (Oct. 1-Mar. 17)
White Wyandotte	255	18.7	98.0
Rhode Island Red	251	19.0	95.1
White Leghorn ...	70	18.5	90.4
Light Sussex	54	20.9	99.4
Barred Rock	30	17.5	84.2
Buff Rock	18	16.7	84.9
Ancona	6	20.2	105.8
	684	18.8	95.5

The pen of White Wyandottes owned by Mr. M. Burchael, Kill, Co. Kildare, still leads with a score of 741 eggs, value £5 9s. 2d.

BARONET "HAUNTED" BY SACRED BONE

We are asked to state that the incidents referred to in a report published last Monday concerning a "sacred" bone from Egypt in the possession of Sir Alexander Seton, who lives in Edinburgh, did not take place at Prestonfield House, Duddingston, which is a well-known Edinburgh mansion house. Prestonfield House, we are informed, is not the home of Sir Alexander and Lady Seton, who were merely tenants for a short period, and left early last year, before the bone came into their possession.

The house and estate belong to Sir Colin Keith Dick Cunyngham, Bart., and for the past year the house has been occupied by Mrs. Dick Cunyngham.

IRISHMAN'S DIARY

An Irish Airman : Show Secretaries : The Chiefs of Dartrey : A Persistent Cat : What Influenza costs

Squadron-Leader E. A. Healy

I was interested to learn that Squadron-Leader E. A. Healy—an old friend of mine, and the son of my old editor, John E. Healy—has been appointed to command No. 107 (Bomber) Squadron of the Royal Air Force. He was transferred to this unit about seven months ago as a Flight Lieutenant, and was promoted to the rank of Squadron-Leader in the February list.

SQUADRON-LEADER E. A. HEALY.

Squadron-Leader Healy joined the Royal Air Force as a cadet in May, 1918. In the following year he was demobilised with an honorary commission as Second Lieutenant, and returned to Trinity.

When he decided, in 1920, to make Service flying his career, he rejoined the R.A.F., and went to the training college at Cranwell. Since that time he has served in India and Aden, as well as on many of the home stations, where he has acted as a test pilot and a flying instructor.

Another Rajah

We had a rajah before in Ireland, and it seems that we are to have one again.

Down in County Meath there is a wonderful place—as big as any rajah's palace. An Oriental prince, who is not unknown in Ireland and knows Ireland well, intends, I hear, to establish headquarters there. He will use it as a breeding establishment for polo ponies, for one thing, and may also start bloodstock-breeding.

It will be a summer residence for a short time, when he is in Europe. On those occasions there will be a staff of Oriental servants and syces, the sight of whom will be a diversion for the colonists from Dingle.

Dartrey Castle

The treasures of Dartrey Castle, I see, are to be dispersed this month.

This Cootehill residence was the seat of the Earls of Dartrey; but there is no longer an Earl, and the property belongs to Lady Edith Windham, of Yorkshire Terrier fame, whose home is in England.

The castle, although only built in 1846, occupies the site of a very old mansion known as Dawson Grove. It stands in what was the MacMahon territory in ancient times. In fact, the MacMahons were Chiefs of the Clans of Dartrey.

The castle contains a fine collection of pictures, some of which are attributed to El Greco, Guido, Reni, Zoffany, Hugh Hamilton and Allan Ramsay.

Those who have a flair for old clocks would love the William and Mary grandfather, with its marquetry case and silver ring, which was made by a Dublin clockmaker of ancient days. It stands in the great hall.

The green pottery dogs of Foo, which can be seen in the lake room, have been in the Dawson family for generations.

For Show Secretaries

I cherish a deep sympathy for that hardy breed of men, the secretaries of agricultural shows. They do a great deal of work, get all the complaints, and precious little else. At this time of the year they are usually racking their brains in the effort to think out some new event which will attract new people to their forthcoming shows.

As a token of sympathy I pass along a word about a new type of competition which I saw in England last year.

It is a cheap meal contest, in which the wives of farmers and farm labourers are invited to prepare a cold lunch for a man—the cost not to exceed ninepence.

I do not know if it could be done at the price on this side, but here are details of the prize-winning entry at the show which I attended. The meal consisted of a home-made meat pie, a salad of lettuce, tomato and egg, biscuits, butter and cheese, and a bottle of cider.

For ninepence that seemed pretty good to me!

A Cat Among the Artists

The Hanging Committee of the Royal Hibernian Academy has been hard at work for a week past, and, I believe, has made excellent progress. But it met with an unpredictable set-back the other day.

The Metropolitan School of Art, where the exhibition is held, affords shelter to a cat, and the said cat proceeded to give birth to kittens in a room at the end of the gallery. It was necessary to lock the door of this room, in order that a large piece of sculpture by my friend, Jerome Connor, might be put against it, and the cat, with her brood, had to be dislodged and rehoused in the cellars.

Then ensued a piteous scene. The cat came back, kitten in mouth, and deposited it at the foot of Jerome Connor's statue, clamouring mournfully for readmission to its old lodging. I am told that the Hanging Committee was hard put to it to refrain from tears; but art must take precedence even over the Life Force, and the cat was evicted once more, kitten and all.

But again it came back, and again, and every time its plaints were more heart-rending.

And now, I am told, the Committee is perturbed by the thought that the homeless mother and child may still be there, even at the base of Jerome's statue, on the opening day—that, in short, they may "steal the picture" from the pictures.

The Coronation Ceremonies

A friend in the cinema business tells me that the film companies are making elaborate preparations for the "shooting" of the Coronation ceremonies.

For the first time in history, news-reel cameras will be allowed inside Westminster Abbey, and the entire church ceremony will be filmed. One company alone will have six cameramen in the Abbey.

The finished prints will be ready shortly after the ceremonies conclude, and will be rushed by air to the principal cities in the British Isles. "Ace" English pilots—including Jim Mollison, C. W. A. Scott and Tommy Rose—have been engaged for this purpose. This high-speed service is a striking contrast to the last Coronation in 1911, when the films were "rushed" to the studios by bicycle!

This year complete pictorial records of the Coronation will be showing in some cinemas within two hours of the King's and Queen's entrance to the Abbey.

The Common Curse

Now that the influenza season is over I may not be considered as adding insult to misery if I comment upon the appalling yearly wastage that is caused by this disease, with its associate, the common cold.

I do not think any figure has been fixed for the Free State, but the common cold in Great Britain alone is estimated to cost £50,000,000 per annum. In such a year as 1918-19, when 151,446 ordinary folk in England and Wales died from influenza, or in 1932-33 when 20,000 deaths occurred, the total expense is almost incalculable.

Such figures place the common cold alongside the worst plague the world has ever known.

The hope of the enlightened physician nowadays is that the next generation will pay at least as much attention to good "health manner" as to elegance and gentility.

In those good new days shop attendants will not lick their fingers before they pick up wrapping paper, thereby transferring millions of bacteria to their customers' goods. 'Bus conductors will not place coins in their mouths, nor will booking clerks moisten tickets. There will be no communal towels in clubs or restaurants.

And it will certainly be stigmatised as bad form and anti-social for people with running colds or coughs to mix in any public assemblies.

QUIDNUNC.

Sir William Beveridge has accepted an invitation to become Master of University College, Oxford, in succession to Dr. A. B. Poynton, who retires this year.

"Why did you make this statement to the Guards if it was untrue?" a witness was asked at Bray District Court yesterday. "I was frustrated," he replied.

A glass of milk & two poached eggs on toa - - - - er - er - I mean a ¼ lb. of Cadburys Milk, please!

Quite an excusable lapse! He's evidently marked and learned the Cadbury Milk Chocolate advertisements.
These advertisements have told him over and over again that a ¼ lb. of Cadburys Milk Chocolate contains as much nourishment as a glass of milk and two poached eggs on one large slice of buttered toast.
This surprising fact about the nourishment provided by Cadburys Milk Chocolate is proved by laboratory analyses, and is based on a scientific calculation of food values.

BOOKS OF THE WEEK

An Actor's Text-Book

The Anatomy of Realism

An Actor Prepares. By Constantin Stanislavsky. London: Geoffrey Bles. 15/- net.

UNTIL recently it was fashionable to decry conscious mental discipline in all forms of art. In literature the battle against "inspiration" (or, more simply, "gush") has been fought and won by Flaubert and Joyce in prose, by Pound and Eliot in verse. In the art of acting it is possible to claim a corresponding victory. Stanislavsky was the founder, and is the director, of the world famous Moscow Art Theatre, and it is this school of acting that dominates the entire Russian stage, the greater part of the American, and a considerable proportion of the European. Even such widely differing methods of presentation as Meyerhold's stylised æsthetic or the grotesque intensity of the Grand Guignol are founded on Stanislavsky's realism; without this rock foundation the former would rapidly have become conventionalised, the latter would never have risen above common melodrama, and even in the heart of the Philistine London the "star" actor is losing ground. It is because this disciplined realism has become so fundamental on the modern stage that "An Actor Prepares" has been described in America (where it has already appeared) as the most important book on the art of acting to appear for many years.

The Eager Pupil

Stanislavski has set himself to provide a text-book of his method, a grammar of acting. Of course, no book can ever provide the extremely personal supervision essential to complete mastery of the "method." But he has done the next best thing. Instead of a series of essays on the composite elements, he has used a semi-fictitious form: the diary of an eager young pupil of the school who records each lesson, reproducing with detailed accuracy the director's instructions, suggestions and criticisms, the pupils' objections and queries. The use of this form arouses the dramatic instinct of the reader, and enables him to follow step by step the personal development and experience of one of Stanislavski's pupils. In this way the elemental parts of the art are each subjected to rigorous scrutiny, action, imagination, concentration, muscular relaxation, sense of truth, communion, leit-motif, and so on—the anatomy of the acting life is laid bare.

The great objection to Stanislavski's method is that, for its full usefulness, it necessitates a permanent company working together for long periods. So far, Russia is the only country where the theatre is so heavily endowed by the State that all the larger theatres (and they are numerous) are able to have their own training school for young actors, where the students are paid wages as though they were already doing productive work.

Biographical Studies

Victorian Worthies

Men Were Different. By Shane Leslie. London: Michael Joseph. 12/6 net.

THESE studies of Randolph Churchill, Augustus Hare, Arthur Dunn, George Wyndham and Wilfred Blunt bring vividly to mind men whose world was different from ours, although so near, and whose minds were strangely different, too. All save Augustus Hare (1834-1903) were personally connected in some way with the author. Randolph Churchill was Mr. Leslie's godfather, Wyndham his first mentor in letters, Dunn his teacher, and Blunt the object of a hero-worshipping admiration.

Whether the essays are invariably in good taste we shall not decide. The quarrel between Randolph Churchill and Edward VII. when Prince of Wales gives a glimpse into affairs in high quarters possibly better forgotten. Historically, however, Randolph Churchill's importance is brought out; time has shown his judgments to be singularly penetrating.

Wyndham, however, provides more sympathetic matter. That remarkable English and Conservative Secretary for Ireland was lamented by Nationalist Ireland. All the Irish Party attended a Memorial Service at Westminster; the O'Brienites sent a wreath, and Tim Healy went to the graveside. Mr. Leslie's vivid account of the man and his mind makes clear the fascination that he exerted on all who knew him.

"British Imports"

At the general election of 1900 "British imports into Ireland included George Wyndham and George Moore." The literary movement captivated both comers, but Wyndham was an open-air man, and his great moment was when he was out in the famous run of December 17th, 1902, in which hounds ran for 22 miles. Wyndham borrowed Sir Anthony MacDonnell from India in the hope that he would help him to reach an Irish settlement. MacDonnell was a Home Ruler, and King Edward's influence secured his appointment. Wyndham's land settlement was hailed by Tim Healy as undoing the confiscations of James, Cromwell and William. Sport and literature preserved the sweetness of a mind to which the violence of Irish politics was distasteful. Chesterton and Belloc became his friends. With Belloc he went book-hunting in France, and suddenly he died.

> "It was well. Indeed, it was well. He did not live to see his dear son and the sons of brother and sisters perish in the field. Those whom the gods loved died before the outbreak of the Great War."

The final essay, on Wilfred Blunt, describes the forerunner of Lawrence of Arabia in colours which make it resemble a half-fantastic tale, with glimpses of the turbulent Ireland of his time, so strangely inconsequent to the stranger's eyes, yet the begettor of our own times.

"The Republic in Being"

From The Rising to the Truce

The Irish Republic. By Dorothy Macardle, with a Preface by Eamon de Valera. London: Victor Gollancz. 25/- net.

THIS exposition, or narrative of events in Ireland during the seven momentous years from 1916 to 1923, may be regarded as an outstanding contribution to the materials of history, and it is certain to remain for many years the best standard reference for that period. It is a fully annotated record, and it is provided with appendices of historical documents and statements, a bibliography of books, periodicals and other publications, and an excellent index. Rather more than a hundred pages are devoted to sketching in the historical background.

During this brief period a profound change came over the political opinions of an increasing number of Irishmen. The men of Easter Week and after owed practically nothing to the inspiration of the Parliament of 1782, or to the idea of "King, Lords and Commons of Ireland," or to the Home Rule Parliamentary Party. The tradition came to them by an older road—from Ireland before the Anglo-Norman invasion, from the confiscations of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, from Wolfe Tone and the United Irishmen, from John Mitchel and '48, from the Fenians, from the G.A.A. and the Gaelic League. In short, the objective was not to repeal the Union, but to reverse the conquest.

EAMONN DE VALERA.

Truth or Falsehood

The author discusses at some length the causes of the Rising, and there are references to the famous "Secret Order," which seems to have been drafted by George and Joseph Plunkett and Rory O'Connor; but whether a fabrication in its entirety for the purpose of forcing a decision to resort to arms rather than wait for inevitable arrest, or whether the document did, in fact, embody plans prepared in the Castle is not yet clear. Nor does it greatly matter; for it will be recalled that no attempt had yet been made to destroy police espionage, and it is certain that the names of all active Volunteers were already in the hands of the Chief Secretary.

Of course, there were other agencies at work to force an issue. The Great War had already lasted for twenty months, and it was unlikely that such an opportunity would recur. Then there was the personal factor—the Military Council of the I.R.B., a small inner circle intent on action. Whatever may have been in the minds of the leaders in the period of preparation as to the possibility of success in a military sense, it is hardly open to doubt that, with the advent of dissension and the imminence of wholesale arrests, the immediate objective became narrowed down to one of simple protest, to redeem their generation by asserting in arms their right to national freedom.

Clarke and Connolly

Each of the leaders knew he was setting his life on that cast. The resolute figure of Thomas Clarke, a man who had endured the horror of fifteen years' penal servitude and emerged unbowed and unbeaten, moves unobtrusively across the stage. James Connolly, ardent Nationalist as well as social revolutionary, whose only fear was that others were not in the same deadly earnest as himself; Padraic Pearse, a comparatively late-comer to the inner councils, some of whose prose writings are among the best this country has produced, a man possessed by the idea of redemption by blood sacrifice; and then McDermott and Plunkett, two fiery spirits whose courage far outpaced their failing bodily strength—such were the men who precipitated military action and so diverted the course of Irish history.

No Next Time

Miss Macardle is to be commended for the restraint and lucidity of her narration of that eventful week and its aftermath. It is made plain that the long-drawn-out series of executions was intended as terrorism pure and simple, a warning to the Irish people that there was going to be no "next time." The futility of such a policy was so manifest that the mentality of its authors is not easy to comprehend. The inevitable result followed—a tide of sympathy supplied a stimulus to the manhood of the country to organise and prepare for action.

We know of no better description of the events of 1917 than is to be found in this volume, a year in which new discussion arose on account of a desire for an open national movement and consequent resentment of the secret control of the I.R.B. This led to the resignation of de Valera and Brugha from that body. A further difficulty arose from the refusal of Griffith and his immediate followers to commit themselves to a Republican objective. A compromise (the work of de Valera) eventually united all these elements. That compromise was that the immediate aim should be the securing of international recognition of Ireland as an independent Republic on the understanding that when this status was achieved the Irish people would be free to choose, by referendum, their own form of Government. The political organisation and the Volunteers were still separate, and though de Valera was elected President of both, the I.R.B. continued to exercise its influence through the latter body.

Ruthless Action

The narrative then deals with the resistance to conscription and with the general election of 1918 and the events which immediately followed it. Many just men have asked themselves how far the result of the 1918 election entitled the majority of the elected representatives to constitute themselves "the Government of the Irish Republic" and in due course to support the policy of taking life in defence of the Republic. It is a difficult constitutional question, but the authoress refers to neither doubt nor difficulty.

From that time until the Truce the conflict gathered momentum. For the first time in Irish revolutionary history action was taken ruthlessly and drastically against the spy and the informer, and (chiefly through the efforts of Michael Collins) an efficient intelligence service was created and maintained. Dublin Castle was thereby deprived of those agencies on which it had always formerly relied. The result is summed up by M. Goblet and quoted by Miss Macardle:—

> "The British Administration could no longer succeed in governing Ireland; it could only prevent her governing herself."

For a temperate and graphic story of the manner in which that policy was pursued the reader is referred to the pages of this book. There are set forth the correspondence which preceded the appointment of delegates to the London Conference, and an account of the proceedings of the Conference itself (and this should be read with the fuller treatment in "Peace by Ordeal"). The split which followed the signing of the Articles of Agreement is then dealt with, and the harrowing tale of the subsequent civil conflict and its sequel.

Verbal Errors

There is much to praise in this book, and there are also some points for general criticism. One has been hinted at above, the remainder are of minor importance; but we noted far too many verbal errors for which the printer cannot be blamed. Then, on p. 64, John Kells Ingram is misquoted, and there are numbers of misspelt proper names and wrong initials scattered through the text. Thomas Clarke once remarked to a young contributor to the Gaelic American that "John Mitchel would turn in his grave if he knew you spell his name with two ll's." There is no excuse for the authoress making this mistake no fewer than eight times, and, in one instance, thereby misquoting from Pearse's oration at the grave of O'Donovan Rossa.

IN SEARCH OF ONESELF

WHAT'S IN THAT NAME?

MEMOIRS AND THE FUTURE

DR. GOGARTY'S memoirs were published on Thursday. With the barest possible time lag the prominent members of the Dublin literary, artistic, social and alcoholic circles pounced upon the book, and scrabbled hurriedly through its pages in search of themselves. They are at it now, and they will continue to be at it for many a controversial day and night to come.

Wanted—An Audience

On the whole, to find oneself included in the memoirs of a distinguished citizen is inclined to give one pleasure, confidence and a whole fund of fresh, and mainly apocryphal anecdotes which involve oneself and the great man. "Do you see what Dr. Gogarty says about me?" you begin. (From at least three out of the four circles I have enumerated there will be no encouraging reply—they will be intent upon the formulation of their own narra-

Problems

There is, however, the ripe possibility that the great man, in your estimation, has been guilty of a certain distortion of the precise form of the truth; or of an obvious and totally unamusing desire to annoy. The situation then is fraught with problems of an exceedingly complex nature. Should the insult be laughed away in scorn; or does it call for a consultation with a responsible solicitor? Would it be wise to tax the author with the passage before a crowd of friends, and chance increasing the intensity of your discomfort; or would you be justified in letting the whole thing drop, in the hope that your inaction would not be taken as evidence of complacence?

Mention a Name

One other difficulty presents itself. In the case where the author has lent one of his characters a fictitious name there is likely to be a ravening horde to worry that name to death. If the mention is favourable the situation is fast-moving; if there is a slur implied the situation is unmentionable. People will fight, in the first case, to establish their identity with the ferocity of a long-lost heir. In the second, as a form of self-defence. Poet A will rake up things about Painter B's past life which everybody knows about, but which nobody has mentioned openly until now. Dr. Gogarty in his book has two or three fictitious names; and thus I think it might be better if I left Sackville street before I am accused of provoking strife.

Picture of Our Times

We will consider the question of the modern autobiography, and its value as an instructor of future generations. The autobiography, to use an unpleasant (and I see now) unfortunate simile, has become as common as mud. Politicians, playwrights, musicians, adventurers, miners, writers and acrobats turn out a huge volume of reminiscences every year. Some of these reminiscences do not run exactly parallel with the truth, but I think it is fair to say that the majority of them give a fairly accurate picture of our times, of our troubles, and of something which we have all started to have—our "psychology." This vast store of memoirs has no counterpart in any other age. Only the most distinguished of the Greeks and Romans had the ability, or the opportunity, to leave recollections of their times; and it was much the same in all subsequent generations. With the perfection of the printing machine, however, the supply of books began to increase, until it has reached its present staggering level; and with the perfection of the printing machine the "man-in-the-street" was presented with the chance to make himself immortal—or, at least, to put his memories on paper for general distribution.

A Lasting Record

I cannot foresee if the sociologists of 2937 will pore over the autobiographies of—to take at random—Dr. Gogarty, Ernie O'Malley and Dr. Collis. Perhaps, in 1,000 years the world will be so splendid a place that there no longer will be any interest in things of the past; but I do foresee one thing. The autobiography of 1937 may be an illegible lump of rags and tatters by the end of the century. Mass-production may put the writers' work on the market with satisfactory speed: but they who would serve the scholars of 2937 had better experiment with ferro-concrete and sheet steel.

A Worker's Life

From Factory to Authorship

Smoky Crusade. By R. M. Fox. London: Hogarth Press. 10/6 net.

THE author of this brilliant autobiography is a familiar figure in Irish journalism, and the writer of several books on industrial and political subjects. Throughout his comparatively short life he has been engaged in the struggle for personal and national liberty. Since he came to Ireland some seventeen years ago his sympathy and energy have been devoted to the political struggle in this country, and he has been an intimate of many of the leaders in the more advanced groups.

Born in England, Mr. Fox at an early age went to work in a factory, and he gives a vivid description of this phase of his development. "I have always preferred life to money," he says, and he has certainly lived to the fullest capacity. If travel be the fullest expression of life, Mr. Fox has already enjoyed it thoroughly. From his factory he secured a scholarship to Ruskin College, Oxford, but the enjoyment of the scholastic interlude was deferred by a variety of causes. He was in Russia in the early stages of the Soviet revolution, and the development of that movement evidently had a great effect upon his thought.

Personal Studies

Those who know Mr. Fox's book on "Rebel Irishwomen" will not need to be told that he is excellent as a writer about people with whom he has come into contact. Whether it is of the early days in the factory, in Ruskin College, in Russia or in Ireland, he has discovered interesting people to inspire his pen. These personal studies are probably the most absorbing part of the book; but the personality of Mr. Fox himself is hardly revealed to the extent that might be expected. There will be another book on the same subject in due time, and in that book the author will probably reveal more of himself. There is in the present volume a touch of complacency which is undoubtedly unintentional, and is clearly far from the feeling of the author. What does emerge in the book is a portrait of a personality who is more interested in his environment than in himself.

The Romance of Decadence

Bandits in a Landscape. By W. Gaunt. London: "The Studio." 10/6 net.

FOR the layman, with only a very dabbling interest in art, this is an unusually interesting book. Mr. Gaunt has set himself a very wide subject—no less than romantic painting through the three centuries from Caravaggio to Delacroix. Over such a vast scope some sort of discrimination was necessary, and Mr. Gaunt has made this selection by what is the most entertaining and least pedantic method, by that of simple individual interest. "Starting with a special interest in one or two individuals," he says in his preface, "I found it necessary to go back (or forward) to learn more of others." But though he thus modestly makes no pretence at a scholarly, consistent presentation, or even at a representative selection, it is immediately evident to the reader that there is a central underlying unity of interest, which is brought out all the more strongly by the casualness of the approach.

For our generation the period selected is undoubtedly the most difficult to appreciate or even to understand. Most of us have a general idea of the classics of the Renaissance, and some degree of spontaneous appreciation of the work from Cezanne and Van Gogh onwards. But if asked to describe, even in the most general terms, what happened between these periods, above all in that enigmatical eighteenth century, we should be frankly at a loss. Emphasising throughout the individual personality of the artist, but not neglecting suggestions as to how a changing society modified that individuality, Mr. Gaunt has built up a convincing description of the general emotive principles underlying artistic expression during this period.

No Ruffian

The work of some fourteen or fifteen artists is here swiftly, incisively sketched. Essentially, the work is a painter's sketch-book, for with a few deft phrases Mr. Gaunt seems to sketch in the portraits of the artist he is describing, focussing interest where it is most relevant, passing lightly over less important details; for example: "Salvator (1615-1753) was not a ruffian, but he provided ruffianism with a conscience. He ascended from brutality to pessimism, and was the critic of society as well as its foe; the Byron of the seventeenth century."

The period considered falls naturally and easily into three main divisions: The early post-Renaissance in Italy, where the artist was frequently a bandit in the literal sense of the word—to this Salvator and Caravaggio belong; the "eighteenth century" proper, where art became gentlemanly, and the desolate cult of melancholy proceeded; finally, the early romantic movement, with both its revolutionary idealistic fervour, and its nostalgic abstraction from life, under the pressure of disillusion, finding its fullest expression in Delacroix. Throughout all these periods the artist remained, as the title of this book implies, outside society, a decentralised, at times almost dehumanised, figure—a bandit.

The work of all these different artists is shown by an able selection of some forty photographic reproductions of their work, and the producers are to be congratulated on a book which excels even that high standard of excellence we have learnt to expect from publications of The Studio.

New Novels

Fish Out of Water. By Dorothy Lambert. Collins. 7/6 nst.

MISS LAMBERT avoids all subtleties. She wants to write about a fish out of water, and she selects a very obvious type of fish and an equally obvious area of dry land, suitably populated to disturb any self-respecting fish. Anybody could have foreseen that Damaris Verity was completely unsuited for marriage with a pompous Indian civil servant, but Damaris thought that his slight facial resemblance to Conrad Veidt was sufficient reason for marrying Rodney, and with as slender a tie as that it is not surprising that she is a complete failure in his Anglo-Indian circle. She gets herself into very awkward predicaments, and flounders stupidly and desperately like her prototype the fish, before an accident restores her to more suitable waters.

The Valley of the Sky. By Tarlton Rayment. Ivor Nicholson and Watson. 7/6 net.

This story is the British Empire winner of the All Nations £4,000 Prize Novel Competition, and as such is sure to attract many readers. For ourselves we found it slow and uninteresting reading, partly because of the dialogue, which varies from broad Scotch to the conventional form of expression chosen to represent the speech of aborigines; and partly because, having no standard of comparison, it proved difficult to disentangle the fanciful from the historic. The author has attempted to depict the early Australian scene and to portray the early pioneers, with all their struggles and achievements, hopes and despairs. The comradeship of the blacks with the white settlers, the march of progress against the inertia of savagery—these are irrefutable facts, vividly presented; but of the symbolism and beauty claimed for this novel we found little.

The Bells of Basel. By Louis Aragon. Lovat Dickson: Peter Davies. 7/6 net.

"THE Bells of Basel" is a very long novel, which tells the stories of three women. Of Diane, who is quite amoral and quite intent on the good things of life; of Catherine, who sees that the old way of things is bad and struggles to meet the demands of the new; and of Clara Zetkin, who is an out-and-out active revolutionary. The background is France in the decade prior to 1914. For ourselves we found this novel difficult to read. There are hundreds of characters and their doings are described in a conversational style which tends to leave the reader some way behind. Here is an example: "Madame de Nettencourt, at Topsy's, told Madame Blin how marvellous General Dorsch had been in the whole affair, and the high moral guarantee which his functions conferred upon him. . . . Diane had been so upset by all these things that she had consented to receive Abbé Gabriel. Just between ourselves, that Brunel fellow had a detestable influence upon her; it was he who had estranged her from her religion." If you can keep with these ramifications M. Aragon has a truly Gallic and delightful wit.

The White Farm. By Geraint Goodwin. Jonathan Cape. 7/6 net.

Mr. Goodwin interests himself in the Welsh peasants and the Welsh poor, and endeavours in a dozen or so short sketches to present, against a typical background, varying types. He succeeds up to a point. The characters are distinctly Welsh; the situations have, at least, a Welsh twist, but all he does is a little too obvious and facile. A cameraman and a microphone could achieve as much, if not more. The Welsh people, unlike the Irish, lack literary exponents. Music, not language, seems to be still their medium of self-expression. There is something lacking in Mr. Goodwin's vision, which makes these sketches ephemeral; half-seen characters we forget, situations which lose their national characteristics when remembered apart from the scene.

Country Dance. By Gideon Clarke. Ivor Nicholson and Watson. 7/6 net.

This novel starts rather dully with a group of semi-intellectuals leading the simple, but slightly Bohemian, life in a remote English village. The half-dozen or so members of the group have their own Bloomsbury-bred love affairs, but the village rather surprisingly produces two young men who are destined to play important rôles in the story. The situation even at this point does not promise well, but suddenly Mr. Clarke gets going and becomes positively exciting. All sorts of sudden and unexpected things happen, and our interest is definitely aroused. The characterisation acquires significance and the finale is most impressive.

Death Without Battle. By Ludwig Renn. Secker and Warburg. 6/- net.

THIS is a purely political novel—a series of graphic snapshots of the people who mattered in Germany just before and just after the rise of Hitler to power. All the characters are connected either with the Communists or the Fascists, and, with one exception, they are all men. No attempt is made to give the novel any extra political interests; lives are simplified to a series of political conversations, interspersed with really revolting descriptions of Nazi brutality. All the well-known historical facts are described—the so-called "elections," with all the Nazi's opponents in gaol; the burning of the Reichstag, Dimitrov's trial, the antagonism between the S.A. and the still more corrupt bosses, culminating with the butchery of Rhoem and his associates; but there is complete lack of dramatic discrimination. There are no climaxes.

The book differs from the majority of crude anti-Fascist novels in that an attempt is made to show the Nazi rank-and-file as the honest idealists that many of them were before they were sold out by their bosses. Even so, it is probable that such over-simplification does more harm than good to the political movement, for which the author, a former aristocrat, is now fighting in Republican Spain.

People in Cages. By Helen Ashton. Collins. 7/6 net.

That we all live caged lives is the theme of Miss Helen Ashton's latest novel, "People in Cages." She studies a number of people, each with his or her own special problem, and solves them by reference to the lives of animals in the Zoo. So we read about the coffee planter from Kenya, whose gift to the Zoo horrified him; about the dishonest financier about to give his creditors the slip; about the society girl and the explorer who quarrel by the sea lion pond; about the lift-man from a hospital and the assistant from a beauty parlour; the spoiled wife of a Harley street doctor, and many others who suffer captivity with more or less stoical endurance. The arm of coincidence is strained occasionally, but, on the whole, Miss Ashton may be said to have written a most interesting book. The form of the book is in itself worthy of study.

Out of Evil. By D. G. Waring. John Long. 7/6 net.

The author of this novel of Irish country life gives us the impression of being an Englishman who had greatly enjoyed a sojourn in Ireland at some time and had decided to incorporate some of his impressions and experiences into a novel. So many of the incidents which appear ordinary and commoplace to us are emphasised and rather lengthily dwelt on; and so many other incidents which might strike Irish readers as strange are accepted and recorded as perfectly normal and expected. Mr. Waring may, of course, be an Irishman interpreting the charm of the Irish gentry to puzzled English readers, and adopting deliberately a naive and painstaking manner in order to lead them up the garden path. Whichever may be the case, this is a story of a tumbled-down Irish estate in County Down, of its inhabitants, tenants and neighbours, and of the well-to-do English paying guests who become intimate with the family.

Maynooth from Within

A Priest's Recollections

I Remember Maynooth. By Don Boyne. London: Longmans Green. 5/- net.

WHOEVER wishes to see the world's largest ecclesiastical college from the inside, through the eyes of a typical student from the South of Ireland (the accent suggests Cashel) should read this little book.

The writer evidently is a first-rate classical man; his writing has a flavour which masters of style would relish. Gracefully he calls up the class-rooms, the playing fields and debating rooms, the chapel, pulpit, altar of his Alma Mater, and we feel his pious love, his filial pride. Maynooth men, no doubt, will cherish the book. Other clergy will read it with intense interest and much sympathy. Laymen will approach it with curiosity and lay it down, not without admiration both for the theme and for the writer, who so finely has vindicated it. Maynooth revisited: what that means we learn from the priest who writes:

> . . . It is good to go back there frequently in the spirit. It is good for a man to stand apart in Joseph's Square and feel the solemn silence at the end of the day; to be aware of those old familiar houses half hidden in the darkness, and in some strange way to learn from them the true meaning of detachment; to feel at home where the atmosphere is of prayer and peace, to be once again of the company of his class-fellows and contemporaries; to be reborn into those youthful days of high ideals and great enthusiasm; to be young again—young again in Maynooth, where the eyes are filled with the vision of one's priesthood to come, and the heart is warmed with the ancient charities.

There are several passages of somewhat purple writing which will become stock pieces, no doubt, in school books hereafter; but the chief merit of the book is in the careful, though almost informal, picture which it draws of a college that prefers depth to brilliance, though it has brilliance enough; a college where character and intellect are shaped by a severe and ancient discipline; where politics and kindred affairs of the secular world find no entrance—"Don Boyne" is insistent upon that; where the classics still are cultivated, and where humour that is mellow as old wine is enjoyed.

A Volume of Sermons

The Mystery of the Kingdom. By Ronald Knox. London: Sheed and Ward. 3/6 net.

THIS volume of sermons by the famous writer and humorist reveals a scholarly and priestly mind, with a deep knowledge of the Scriptures. Father Knox brings to bear upon his sermons the same originality and freshness which he shows in his popular writings, and the result is most satisfying.

The sermons are divided into two series, one of which was preached at the Carmelite Church in Kensington under the title, "The Mystery of the Kingdom"; the other, called "The Harvest of the Cross," which was preached at St. Charles's, Ogle street. The first series, "The Mystery of the Kingdom," is an attempt to group Our Lord's parables together as a single system, with uniform principles of interpretation and a uniform ground plan—namely, the doctrine of the Church and of human salvation thrown into relief against a background of Jewish Messianic speculation. The other series is a regrouping of familiar figures, the principal actors in Our Lord's Passion, under headings suggested by the Parable of the Sower.

NEWS SUMMARY

IRELAND

The Sligo Feis Ceoil concluded last night with a prize-winners' concert. A feature of the day's competitions was the winning of dual awards by Dublin players in the piano classes and in the violin classes.—(Page 5.)

GREAT BRITAIN

Eight persons were killed and twenty injured in a railway collision near Victoria Station, London, yesterday.—(Page 9.)

A strut belonging to the aeroplane in which the Duchess of Bedford was flying when she disappeared eleven days ago has been found washed ashore at Yarmouth.—(Page 9.)

ABROAD

Following the meeting of the Standing Council of the Little Entente in Belgrade, the belief is expressed that the European situation has vastly improved.—(Page 9.)

Heavy blows were struck by both sides in the Spanish civil war yesterday. More than seventy people were killed in an air raid on Jaen yesterday afternoon, ordered by General Quiepo de Llano for the alleged bombing of a Cordoba hospital by the Government.—(Page 9.)

FINANCIAL

Dublin Market was irregular. Free State funds were active, and Bank of Ireland and Nationals moved up.—(Page 14.)

In Lombard street the price of gold was fixed at 142s. 1½d. per ounce.—(Page 14.)

Mare Nostrum

Regarding matters of personal prestige Signor Mussolini may be almost childish in his vanity; but where Italy's interests are concerned he is nobody's fool. Since he discovered last year that he could twist the British lion's tail almost with impunity, he has been doing everything in his power to undermine British influence in the Mediterranean. He knows that this sea is of vital importance to the British Empire, that it constitutes the main route between the British Isles and India, that it has been controlled by the Royal Navy for more than a century, and that any interference with Britain's position between Gibraltar and Suez would cause the gravest concern in London. When Signor Mussolini decided to annex Abyssinia, and thus to create an Italian Empire on a large scale, he feared for a time that Great Britain might close the Suez Canal, and in this way put an immediate end to his Ethiopian ambitions. Britain, however, preferred to rely on the League of Nations and economic sanctions, which, unhappily, did not work. The Italians were allowed to send their troopships through the Suez Canal without let or hindrance, and Signor Mussolini was able to snap his fingers in the face of the well-meaning talkers at Geneva. The period of sanctions revealed for the first time the essential weakness of Britain's position in the Mediterranean. Malta became almost untenable. The Admiralty realised this fact at an early stage, because it became obvious that a determined air attack on the island would ruin it as a naval base in a few hours. The Fleet then was sent to Alexandria, where it remained in a more or less ignominious position until the danger of an armed clash with Italy was at an end. Since that time Signor Mussolini has not been idle. Not only has he strengthened Italy's position in the Dodecanese, thereby threatening the authority not alone of Britain, but also of France, in Asia Minor, but he has fortified the little island of Pantellaria, between Sicily and Tunis, and consequently has challenged the passage of British ships from Gibraltar to the Canal. For the first time in many years the main route to India is unsafe. Italy, which quite recently was a second-class Power, seems to be ready to dispute Britain's supremacy in the Mediterranean.

Signor Mussolini is far too clever to imagine that his ambition to turn the Mediterranean into an Italian lake can be realised by naval or military measures alone. Diplomacy must play an important part in the process. For that reason he has entrusted his son-in-law, Count Ciano, who distinguished himself in the Abyssinian campaign, with a kind of roving commission to make friends with some of the other Mediterranean Powers. The Count's most notable achievement up to date has been an agreement with Yugoslavia, which was concluded on last Thursday week. The Yugoslavs have a cordial hatred of the Italians—a hatred that has its roots deep down in history. After the war, when Gabriele d'Annunzio seized Fiume without any kind of warrant from anybody, this hatred became accentuated, especially as Yugoslavia already had lost Trieste, which was claimed as a Slovene city, as well as Istria and Zara on the Dalmatian coast. When the Abyssinian dispute was in progress the Yugoslavs remained loyal to their obligations under the League of Nations Covenant, thereby forfeiting a large portion of their export trade; for Italy was one of their best customers. The League did not support them, and when the war against the Abyssinians was over the Yugoslavs found themselves at an almost dead loss. Signor Mussolini now has taken advantage of their embarrassment to drive an excellent bargain with Belgrade. Count Ciano has made important economic concessions to the Yugoslavs, re-opening the Italian market to certain Yugoslav products in return for a guarantee of security on Italy's Adriatic border, and an assurance of certain sources of raw materials in the Balkans. The Yugoslavs have as little love for Italy as ever they had, but they are realists. They know that their loyalty to the Covenant during the Abyssinian affair brought them not only no gain, but very serious loss. They are afraid that one of these days there may be a war in the Mediterranean, and, although all their sympathies would be against the Italians, they take the view that it is well to agree with thine adversary quickly whiles thou art in the way with him. The Yugoslavs are entirely within their rights in the matter; if the Italians have won them over, even temporarily, the League Powers—and Britain in particular—have nobody but themselves to blame.

Having dealt with Yugoslavia, Count Ciano is going to Montreux, where he will state Italy's attitude towards the problem of the capitulations in Egypt, and may make another bid for Egyptian friendship there. Then he proposes to visit Kemal Ataturk at Ankara, with a view to the negotiation of an Italo-Turkish pact. All these moves, which, let us repeat, are entirely legitimate, are calculated to build up an anti-British bloc in the Mediterranean. Whether or not they will succeed remains to be seen. The situation is not so simple as it might appear to be at first sight. Turkey is linked up with Yugoslavia, via the Balkan Pact, and Yugoslavia is one of the members of the Little Entente, whose raison d'être is to oppose Germany and Hungary in Central and South-Eastern Europe. Signor Mussolini openly has declared his sympathy with the Magyar cause, which is in direct conflict with Yugoslav interests. He has also been making common cause with the Germans, who are the avowed enemies of the Little Entente. Diplomacy is purely a matter of expedients, and it may be possible to reconcile all these clashing agreements and understandings on the cynical theory that no modern pact is binding if either of the signatories wishes to ignore it. The very intricacy of Signor Mussolini's policy against Britain may prove to be its undoing; but the British Government would be very foolish to leave anything to chance. For the moment Britain seems to be confining her activities to rearmament, and there is no doubt that she is wise. In the final analysis force is the only argument to which a dictator will listen, and a powerful British fleet in the Mediterranean would be worth a dozen political pacts. All the smaller Powers are waiting anxiously to see how far the British will go. None of them has very much faith in Italy, whereas they have a traditional respect for the Royal Navy; and if British sea-power should be restored to its former strength there would be a general scramble to be on the British side. On the other hand, British diplomacy ought not to allow Signor Mussolini to catch it napping. At all costs the Mediterranean must be kept free for British shipping; no sacrifice could be too great in this cause.

Alberta's Experiment

From the moment that he took office as Prime Minister in the autumn of 1935 Mr. Aberhart's Government has been in trouble. Alberta, one of Canada's "prairie provinces," had been lured by the revivalist fervour of Mr. Aberhart into giving his Social Credit Party 56 of the 63 seats in its Legislature by a promise of £5 as a bonus, to be paid every month to every adult citizen. As month succeeded month and no bonus dividend came to the citizens through the provincial mails the voters became restive and made no secret of their intense disappointment. The absence of the dividends was not really due to Mr. Aberhart's lack of fervour; it was due simply to the inability of the province to implement a rash pledge given by a zealot in the atmosphere of a general election. Actually, the remedy of social credit which he has proposed was not within his legal power to apply, as the control of currency and credit belongs to the Federal authority of the Dominion of Canada and not to the provinces. It was impossible that the Province of Alberta should distribute its social credit bonus in Canadian currency, since the provincial Government found difficulty in raising enough money to meet current expenses of administration. To make the possibility of fulfilling his promise more remote for Mr. Aberhart the finances of Alberta were already in a chaotic condition when he undertook to pay the dividends, as the slump in agricultural prices and a period of reckless finance had been disastrous for a community of farmers. In their desperate straits these farmers looked to Mr. Aberhart, who promised a certain regular income to people whose incomes had dwindled almost to vanishing point. He was in trouble from the start, but his followers gave him loyal support while he negotiated with the Dominion Government for financial assistance and with the holders of Albertan securities to accept lower interest rates. The negotiations failed with both parties, and the province was forced to take action, which was later declared by the courts to be ultra vires. Despite this decision, the Budget, which a newly-appointed Treasurer introduced into the Legislature on 13th March, incorporated again the reduction of the interest rates. No sooner had the Budget been introduced than Mr. Aberhart was faced with a revolt among the members of his party. A body of thirty-five of his supporters introduced legislation on the lines previously indicated by Major Douglas, the English engineer who first propounded the theory of social credit some twenty-five years ago. Agitation against the orthodoxy of the Budget developed to such a pitch that it had to be suspended to give an interval for a complete social credit plan to be devised under the direction of Major Douglas. Within the coming couple of months the harassed Premier must set up a commission, over which Major Douglas is to be invited to preside, to work out a practicable plan by which his electioneering promise may be implemented, and under which his Alberta credit may be transformed into a working system of currency. Whether any such system is possible within the existing Federal currency system may be doubted, but the experiment is worth attention.

Iron Laws

While no one nowadays offers to the laws of political economy the same degree of awesome credibility as a McCullagh or a Ricardo, they have, none the less, a most disturbing way of making their presence felt. It is not now the fashion to ascribe to economic laws the immutability of nature; but we are frequently reminded that economic laws still are operative. When the causes have been given free play the effects follow with all the force of Nemesis, and with the inevitability of the classic economists. A century ago the "iron laws" were the commonplaces of economic discussion; to-day they are absent from discussion, but still operative in fact. The most superficial investigation of contemporary facts will convince anyone of this: it is necessary only to look at the present economic situation in Great Britain, in the United States, or in Saorstát Eireann, to observe the economic laws in retributive operation. The rearmament policy of the British Government has brought thousands of unemployed workers back to work, stimulated the demand for almost every commodity from raw ore to delicate scientific instruments, and sent prices soaring. In the United States the same series of events present like effects; and in Saorstát Eireann the circle is no less evident. Rising commodity prices are, undeniably, one of the primary needs of industrial rehabilitation after the prolonged period of depression, but the immediate corollary of rising prices has not yet been so generally recognised. The United States' strikes, the strikes in France, strikes in Great Britain, and threats of strikes in Saorstát Eireann are all manifestations of the activity of economic laws. With increased demand prices rise; with rising prices living costs also rise; and with the rising cost of living organised labour becomes restive. The Clyde has had new shipbuilding work at the rate of ten million pounds in a single month; the immediate effect is a strike by workers who are alleged to be paid at a rate higher than their trade union accepted on their behalf. Prosperity thus has its own difficulties, tending to illustrate the fact that the laws of economics have a potency many people would deny. What the present state of affairs in many countries shows is that the iron laws are still iron.

Accidents Analysed

When one contemplates the ever-increasing number of motor cars, motor lorries, and cyclists which struggles for existence upon the roads; the ever-increasing complexity of road signs and road regulations; and the toll of death and destruction which this confusion takes of all and sundry, one must come to the conclusion that it is an evil which must be borne—that the problem cannot be solved. Every day the newspapers are filled with reports of children crushed to death by lorries, and of motor cars shattered beyond recognition in head-on collisions; and, reading these accounts, one finds it difficult to obtain a broad view of the general causes of such a holocaust. The individual failings of the millions who use the roads seem to be the cause of the accidents; and to classify these failings must appear an almost hopeless task. In fact, however, it is very seldom indeed that an accident occurs which has no precedent; virtually every collision may be ascribed to some set cause. One sees this clearly in the analysis of accidents which has just been prepared by the Ministry of Transport in London—an analysis which contains no less than 100,000 reports. It almost seems that if the Ministry had unlimited powers and unlimited resources the number of accidents might be reduced to a reasonably low figure within quite a brief space of time. In the open countryside there were far more deaths than in the built-up areas which are subject to a speed-limit, and the majority of these deaths occurred on straight roads and at uncontrolled junctions. The two-way road and the one-level junction are unsafe. There must be divided traffic streams, and "fly-over" junctions. In the built-up areas the total number of accidents was three times as great as that in open country. Therefore the jumble of pedestrians, motor vehicles, cyclists, and horse-drawn carts in the cities must be resolved into its component parts, and every part must be segregated as far as possible from the other. That is all—and we wonder if these two ends will be achieved in another fifty years.

BASQUE TOWN BOMBED AGAIN

BIG CASUALTY LIST IN JAEN AIR RAID

SEVERE BLOWS STRUCK IN SPANISH STRUGGLE

GOVERNMENT TROOPS GAIN IN SOUTH

SEVERE blows were struck by both sides yesterday in the Spanish civil war, according to reports from the many fronts where fighting has flared up afresh.

Insurgent bombers are reported to have inflicted a further 200 casualties among the stricken townspeople of Durango, the Basque town south-east of Bilbao, where 200 people were killed and at least 150 wounded in an air raid on Wednesday.

A REPRISAL

Other insurgent 'planes bombed the Southern Spanish town of Jaen and killed seventy people. This, according to General Queipo de Llano, was a "reprisal" for the bombing of a Cordoba hospital by the Republicans.

While the insurgents appear still to be taking the initiative in the mountainous country south and east of Bilbao, the Government claims to be widening the area around the southern town of Pozoblanco, daily assuring an increasing supply of minerals from this rich mining region.

COAST SHELLED

The battleship Espana fired its 12-inch guns at the Basque coast east of Bilbao, while insurgent infantry moved up to attack a point seven miles inland, but the resistance of the Basque mountaineers was strong.

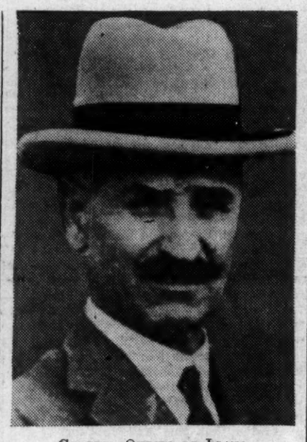
Government 'planes bombed the ammunition factory at Penarroya, due west of Pozoblanco, while their troops pressed on towards Ovejo, seventeen miles due south.

STRICKEN DURANGO

Madrid, following the above events with eager interest during a period of comparative calm, was shelled in the afternoon, but the casualties do not appear to have been heavy.

General Miaja promised that "things will soon start humming again" on the fronts around the capital.

The Catalan Cabinet crisis, which blew up over Easter, ended yesterday with the formation of a new Government, in which the U.G.T. (Socialists' and Communists' Trade Union) has increased its membership from three to four, according to the Spanish Press Agency. The position of the other parties, it is stated, remains the same.



General Queipo de Llano

BASQUE ADMISSION

Following the admission that Basque troops had retired to their second line of defence, Bilbao yesterday claims that the big insurgent thrust on the eastern front is being substantially checked, says a Bayonne telegram.

Communiqués which describe insurgent gains as of "little strategic importance," and insist that "everything is happening according to plan," are followed by a confident statement upon the battle for the formidable heights of the Sierra of Gorbea.

INSURGENT CLAIM

The insurgents claim to have occupied this natural 2,000 to 5,000 foot barrier, but the Basque authorities say "a certain number of enemy troops have succeeded in infiltrating by night into our positions. Their attack, however, has been localised, and the enemy is in a precarious position following the counter-attacks of our troops." They feel confident that the heights of Gorbea and Mount Arlaban will prove an insuperable obstacle to the attackers.

Italian participation in the Bilbao offensive is understood to be considerable, but at the moment precise details are lacking.

BURGOS

The Government forces are now only some thirty-five miles from Burgos, the insurgent "capital," following the capture of Sargentes and neighbouring villages.

The British Consul at Bilbao, Mr. Stevenson, visited the towns of Durango, the streets of which are red with blood from its terrible hammering from the insurgent air raid on Wednesday, and again yesterday, as well as Elorrio and Ochandiano, which also suffered.

According to a Havas Agency message, Mr. Stevenson described the scene as being "as terrible as those of the Great War."

AIR RAID CASUALTIES

The total number of non-combatants killed at Durango in Wednesday's raid is now given as more than 130, including fourteen nuns, two priests who were celebrating Mass, and two firemen who were attempting to put out fires caused by incendiary bombs.

According to reports received in Barcelona from Bilbao, insurgent aircraft inflicted a further 200 casualties in another raid on Durango. The raiding 'planes swooped low and raked the streets with machine-gun fire. From Durango the raiders went on to Elorrio, where they inflicted many casualties and did considerable damge. Ochandiano and other Basque villages were also bombed.

THE OFFENSIVE

The official communiqué from Bilbao states that Thursday's big insurgent offensive was continued yesterday.

The Government forces, says the communiqué, rallied on their new lines and repulsed yesterday's onslaughts.

Insurgent cavalry which filtered round the flank of the five thousand-foot Massif of Gorbea—which the insurgents now claim to have occupied—have been cut off by loyalist troops, and are in a precarious situation.

Late in the afternoon the insurgents launched a fierce attack on the Government forces, holding Aramayona, on the Basques' second line of defence.

SEVENTY KILLED AT JAEN

Insurgent bombers have brought death and destruction on the picturesque old southern Spanish town of Jaen in a devastating air raid, says a Valencia message.

Flying out of the shadow of the mountains in which the town lies, three high-powered tri-engined 'planes dropped, according to a communiqué from Jaen yesterday, 30 bombs of 100 kilos each, killing more than 70 people and destroying many buildings. Two bombs fell in front of a newspaper office, killing seven children and an old man.

The number of injured is stated to be very high.

The work of recovering the bodies and tending the injured was still being carried on last night—twenty-four hours after the raid. Cafés and bars are shut.

The Danish steamer Niobe, which was proceeding with a cargo of fruit from Alicante to Rotterdam, was stopped by insurgent trawlers in the Straits on Thursday night, after leaving Gibraltar, and was conveyed to Ceuta, says a Reuter Gibraltar telegram.

WARSHIPS

Yesterday the following warships patrolled the Straits:—The British destroyer Gipsy, the Netherlands cruiser Java, and the coast defence ship Hertog Hendrik, the French destroyer L'Adroit, and three insurgent armed trawlers.

The German battleship Admiral Scheer has arrived at Algeciras.

Three infantry companies of the Spanish Pavia Regiment have arrived at La Linea from Cadiz. It is understood that they are relieving falangists, who have been engaged on guard duties at La Linea.

The British battleship Queen Elizabeth has returned from Tangier, and the destroyer Vanoc has returned to Cadiz from Huelva.

Three Moorish legionaries were found shot dead on La Linea beach yesterday morning.

INSURGENTS' DRIVE

A late despatch from Vittoria claims the capture by the insurgents of all heights overlooking Ochandiano from the south. The troops of the left wing sector on Mount Gorbea rested yesterday morning to give time for supplies to be brought up by a difficult route. At 2 p.m. the 5th mixed Brigade and a regular brigade moved forward to attack the remaining Basque positions on the mountain. The defenders are stated to have been well entrenched in elaborate redoubts and to have strongly resisted the [illegible] but by nightfall, it is stated, the whole area had been cleaned up by the insurgents and the enemy driven out.

CALL TO THE COLOURS

A Valencia telegram received this morning states:—The War Ministry here has published a decree, calling upon all able-bodied Spaniards resident abroad, belonging to the various classes already called up in Spain, to return to Republican Spain immediately to join the Colours. Spaniards of these classes resident abroad have hitherto been exempted.

DURABLE GOODS BOOM

DANGER SIGN, SAYS PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

PUBLIC WORKS EXPENDITURE

HIGHER STANDARD OF LIVING PLAN

PRESIDENT Roosevelt stated at the Press Conference yesterday that prices for durable goods, such as steel and copper, were far too high, and that the time had come for the Government to discourage federal expenditures on such goods, and encourage expenditures on consumer goods, says a Reuter Washington telegram.

The statement was prompted by a question regarding the future of public works expenditure.

Mr. Roosevelt said that the increase in the production of durable goods was going on more rapidly than that for consumer goods. Describing this as a danger-sign, the President said that nearly every time that this had occurred in the past thirty to forty years there had developed not necessarily a depression, but a falling off within twelve to eighteen months.

THE PROPOSAL

Mr. Roosevelt said that he proposed at a recent meeting of members of Congress to discuss the public works administration. He suggested that in future public works expenditures should not be for steel bridges and other such permanent structures, but for channel-dredging, earthen dams and projects creating larger purchasing power for consumer goods.

As regards steel, the President said that the price of steel had increased by about six dollars a ton, and that this was two or three times the recent increase in wages. He added that foreign naval-building had also run up the production of domestic steel.

ORDERS FOR STEEL

President Roosevelt added that huge orders from England and elsewhere for steel for re-armament purposes were one factor causing an unhealthy increase in the rate of the production price of durable goods, as opposed to consumer goods.

The President said that the time had come to discourage over-rapid production in heavy industries, and encourage a greater distribution of consumer articles.

He indicated that his future policy was to slow down Government public works, utilising products from heavy industries, effecting thereby economies in the relief organisation necessary to balance the Budget, while continuing projects which put money directly in the pockets of the unemployed.

EXTENSIVE FIRE IN CORK

LARGE SHOWROOMS DESTROYED

From Our Correspondent.

CORK, Friday.

Showrooms at Patrick street, Cork, near the Father Mathew Statue, the property of Messrs. Eustace and Co., Ltd., builders' providers, were destroyed by fire between 6 and 7 o'clock this evening. The premises consist of two floors, and both were completely destroyed.

When the outbreak was first observed at about 6 p.m. business people were making their way homewards through Patrick street, and a crowd of some thousands watched the fire, which consumed the interior of the building in less than an hour. Traffic was considerably impeded, and had to be diverted.

The fire brigade succeeded in confining the flames to the seat of the outbreak, but the contents of the showrooms were entirely destroyed. They included such items as wooden panelling, fireplace "surrounds," bathroom fittings, and quantities of paint varnishes, and similar inflammable material.

The cause of the outbreak is not known.

S.W. AFRICA PROCLAMATION

GERMANY TO TAKE ACTION

The proclamation of the Government of the Union of South Africa forbidding foreigners in the mandated territory of South-West Africa to belong to political organisations is being given close attention in Berlin. Reuter was informed last night that the German Government intends to take some action in the matter.

"Germany's official representative in the Union will probably take the matter up with the Union Government," it was declared.

At the office of Herr Bohle, head of the foreign political organisation in charge of Germans living abroad, Reuter was told: "We must decline to make any comment at present."

The proclamation, which is directed against the Nazi movement, prohibits all but British subjects from taking part in any way in activities of declared public bodies or political organisations in the territory which is now governed by the Union under a League mandate.

SIR SIDNEY BARTON

HOME FROM ABYSSINIA

Sir Sidney Barton is at present in Ireland, accompanied by members of his family. Sir Sidney has been Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary and Consul-General in Ethiopia since 1929. He remained at the British Legation in Addis Ababa all during the Abyssinian War, and only returned to England on leave a short time ago. He is a member of a well-known Irish family, the Bartons, of Waterfoot, in Co. Fermanagh, and is a son of the late Captain James Barton, R.A. All the Irish Bartons, including those of Straffan, and Mr. Robert Barton, of Glendalough, descend from a common ancestor, and bear the same crest and motto—"Quod ero, spero."

Sir Sidney, who is tall, slim and middle-aged, first entered the Consular Service in 1895. In the course of his career he has been Vice-Consul at Peking, Tientsin and Shanghai, and has also been Chinese Secretary to the British Legation.

THE LITTLE ENTENTE

FATEFUL TALKS IN BELGRADE

EUROPEAN SITUATION VASTLY IMPROVED

A BELIEF that the European situation has vastly improved is expressed in an optimistic communiqué, issued at the conclusion of the meeting of the Standing Council of the Little Entente in Belgrade last night, says Reuter.

Declaring that the Little Entente is perfectly united on all important questions, the communiqué emphasised the Little Entente's confidence in the League of Nations and the friendship of France.

TO-DAY'S MEETING

The meeting was attended by the Foreign Ministers of Czechoslovakia, Rumania, and Yugo-Slavia, the member-States of the Little Entente. There will be another meeting to-day.

The meetings will be followed immediately by a three-day visit to Belgrade from President Benes, of Czechoslovakia, who will have talks with Prince Paul, the Regent, and Dr. Stoyadinovitch, the Prime Minister.

Dr. Benes.

One report current here states that King Carol of Rumania may possibly go to Belgrade during the visit of Dr. Benes.

ROME-BERLIN AXIS

The foreign policy of Dr. Stoyadinovitch is condemned in a stateemnt issued by the leaders of the Opposition yesterday.

The statement alleges that the Prime Minister has forsaken the traditional policy supporting the League of Nations, and friendship with France and Britain to join the Rome-Berlin Axis. They claim that the new policy is against the wishes of the majority of the nation, and demand a return to the old policy.

THE MEDITERRANEAN

A Rome message states:—A visit by Count Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister, to Ankara, capital of Turkey, about the middle of April is expected to be the culmination of a series of meetings aiming at restoring confidence in the Mediterranean and Central European countries.

The Conference of the Little Entente will be followed by a visit of Dr. von Schuschnigg, Chancellor of Austria, to Italy next week.

It is expected that Signor Mussolini will make use of the occasion to reassure the Chancellor that Italy is still determined to maintain the independence of Austria, despite Italian friendship with Germany.

The repercussions of the Little Entente Conference are also likely to be discussed. Italians have detected signs that the Little Entente States are drawing nearer to the Rome protocol group.

£8,000,000 FOR DEFENCES

HONG KONG MAY BE SECOND SINGAPORE

Proposals to spend about £8,000,000 on strengthening the defences of Hong Kong were revealed yesterday, says Reuter.

Observers at Hong Kong consider that, unless the Powers concerned arrange a non-fortification treaty in respect of the Pacific, Hong Kong is destined to become a second Singapore as regards the impregnability of its defences.

The present plans include the building of two new forts in addition to one already being constructed on the Stanley Peninsula and a large increase in the anti-aircraft defences.

It is also confirmed that Hong Kong will be an important Royal Air Force base.

A British proposal that Article 19 of the Washington Treaty, which expired last year, should be retained, was rejected by Japan. The article prohibited the fortification or further development of naval bases in the Pacific.

VOGUE OF THE SKIMPY ATTIRE

DEPRESSING EFFECT ON TEXTILES

"One of our biggest worries is that people everywhere are wearing less and less," declared one of the delegates to the International Textile Conference which opened in Washington yesterday, says Reuter.

"The workers are far better off to-day than twenty years ago, but their women folk are wearing about half the quantity of clothes they did then. These skimpy modern fashions have the most depressing effect on textiles. We are also doing everything possible to improve the conditions of living in native lands. For example, if every native of Africa and India would wear a cotton suit instead of a loin cloth the effect on world textiles would be prodigious."

Two hundred delegates and advisers from twenty-three nations are attending the conference, which is being held under the auspices of the International Labour Office, with the object of improving conditions in the textile industry throughout the world. It represents the first effort to examine the situation of the textile industries, not nationally, but on a world scale.

U.S. COAL STRIKE SETTLED

The strike of employés in the soft coal industry has been settled, says a Reuter New York telegram.

In addition to the 462,000 coal miners whose grievances are now settled, 122,000 motor car workers, 11,500 tyre workers and 5,000 others are still out.

THE MISSING DUCHESS

PART OF 'PLANE IDENTIFIED

FOUR STRUTS WASHED ASHORE

ELEVEN days after the Duchess of Bedford was reported missing, and after an extensive search, in which Royal Air Force 'planes took part, a strut, washed ashore at Yarmouth yesterday, has been identified by Flight-Lieutenant Preston, her personal pilot, as part of her 'plane.

On the strut is painted a small silver aeroplane with the letters D.H. The maker's number 41772 is attached on an aluminium bracket. As the wind direction has recently been north-easterly the discovery would be consistent with the Duchess's 'plane having fallen into the Wash.

Later three other similar struts were found—one at Southwold, one at Gorleston, and the other at Lowestoft.

SEARCH OVER LARGE AREA

It was on March 22 that the Duchess of Bedford set out from Woburn intending, it was believed, to make a solo flight over the flooded fenland. She did not return to her private aerodrome, and as the hours passed and anxiety increased the search was intensified. Woods were combed, lakes were dragged, and 'planes from ten Royal Air Force stations made an air search. Wireless messages were broadcast for civilians, police patrols, commanders of aerodromes, and ships at sea to keep a look-out. It was the biggest search in recent years.

The Duchess of Bedford was born on September 26, 1865. It was not until she was 62 that she took up flying in earnest. Her reason was that she regarded it as the most exhilarating of sports.

Last Wednesday, after all hope that the Duchess could be alive had been abandoned, a Memorial Service for her was held in the Parish Church of Woburn.

NO NORTHERN T.T. RACE THIS YEAR

DECISION OF DOWN COMMITTEE

A LAST minute effort to save the Tourist Trophy International Car Race for Northern Ireland this year has failed.

Yesterday the Finance and Law Committee of Down County Council discussed a suggestion that a by-pass road should be constructed at Newtownards on the Ards circuit.

The proposal made by the Ulster Tourist Trophy Race Committee is that the by-pass should be constructed to cut out the major portion of Newtownards.

The Finance and Law Committee, however decided that it would not solve the problem of danger to spectators. They suggested that if by-pass roads were constructed at Newtownards and Comber, the two towns on the Ards circuit, for the race in 1938, they would feel inclined to recommend closing the roads on the circuit for the race in that year.

Captain Thompson, Secretary, Ulster Automobile Club, said yesterday: "The Committee's decision means that definitely no race will be held in Ulster this year."

RIOT IN THE PUNJAB

ONE DEAD AND SEVERAL INJURED

A Reuter Bombay telegram states that demonstrations by Bombay Students' Union marked the second day of the new Constitution yesterday. Four students and the Socialist leader Yusuf Meher Ally were arrested last night for obstructing traffic outside the Municipal Buildings. They were later released on bail.

The demonstrations were staged in protest against the acceptance of office in the minority Ministry of Mr. Jamnadas Mehta, former Mayor of Bombay.

This incident follows a more serious one at Kotfatekhan (Punjab) on Thursday, when one person was killed and several on both sides injured, according to reports received here from Lahore. The police opened fire on the rioters and brought the situation under control.

This was the second occasion within a week that the Punjab police have had to use firearms to quell inter-communal disturbances.

Meanwhile, it is announced from Lucknow (United Provinces) that the last of the minority Ministries necessitated by the refusal of Congress to accept office has been formed.

BEARDMORE STRIKERS TOLD TO RETURN

GLASGOW OFFICIAL'S STATEMENT

Although no statement concerning the strike at the Beardmore Works in Glasgow was issued at the close of the meeting of the Executive Council of the Amalgamated Engineering Union in London yesterday, it was learned in Glasgow that the union had insisted upon the Constitution being carried out, and had directed the Glasgow District Committee to instruct members to return to work.

Mr. William Irvine, a member of the Glasgow District Committee, told a reporter that a letter from the National Executive insisted upon the Constitution being observed, and directed the committee to instruct members to return to work, so as to enable the rules of the organisation to be carried out.

The District Committee declared, however, that the rules had been observed, and recognised the strike as being official.

Mr. Fred Smith, the general secretary of the A.E.U., said last night:—"We are not disclosing our views and position to the Press officially at present. I think it is practically certain there will be no development and nothing to say until Monday. I am not prepared to confirm, or even to describe as premature, the rumour that the strikers have been requested to return to work."

MISS AMY JOHNSON

ENTERS FOR NEW YORK TO PARIS RACE

Miss Amy Johnson (Mrs. Mollison) lodged with the Royal Aero Club yesterday an entry for the New York-Paris race which takes place in August. She will fly a French twin-engined 'plane.

A Copenhagen telegram says that Major Harold William Temperley, University Professor of Modern History and Fellow of Peterhouse, Cambridge, was yesterday elected a member of the Danish Royal Academy of Science and Letters.

HANDCUFFED MEN IN COURT

SONGS BEFORE DISTRICT JUSTICE

MAYO MEN CHARGED WITH RIOT

From Our Correspondent.

WESTPORT, Friday.

THERE were unusual scenes at the District Court here to-day, when thirteen Republicans, arrested in Newport on Sunday, following a banned I.R.A. parade in Castlebar, were brought up in custody on remand from a special court at Castlebar. They were charged with riotous and unlawful assembly and assault.

They arrived by special 'bus, in which they were handcuffed in pairs, accompanied by Guards and detectives, and followed by another 'bus, in which was an armed escort.

Entering the courthouse the prisoners immediately started whistling popular airs and shouted: "Up, the Republic." With the arrival of District Justice Coyne the din increased, and the prisoners remained seated when the charges were read.

Large crowds which had assembled outside the courthouse were prevented from entering by a strong force of Gardai.

Several of the prisoners showed signs of injury, and the heads of two were heavily bandaged.

When the charges were being read the prisoners continued to interrupt, and at one stage a prisoner shouted: "That is a damned lie." District Justice Coyne said that if further interruptions took place he would not take any further interest in the case, and a prisoner retorted that "he didn't care a damn whether he (the Justice) did or not."

While the prisoners kept up a continuous fire of interruptions and sang various songs Sergeant Finnerty gave evidence of arrest and identified the prisoners. He swore that Superintendent Glynn, Westport; Sergeant Kelly and Guard Connaughton, of Newport, who, he said, were material witnesses for the prosecution, were ill and unable to attend.

Asked if they wished to ask any questions the prisoners attempted to make a statement, but were not allowed to speak.

Sergeant Finnerty applied for a remand to Castlebar on Wednesday, April 14th, and the Justice remanded the defendants accordingly and refused bail.

As the prisoners were again marched out to the 'bus there were cheers and hand shakes from relatives, and they were handed parcels and cigarettes. The 'bus then started on its return journey to Sligo to the accompaniment of cheers from the prisoners and sympathisers from Westport and Ballycroy, who had assembled in very large numbers.

NORTHERN IRELAND CENSUS

POPULATION INCREASED BY 22,616

From Our Correspondent.

BELFAST, Friday.

There has been an increase in Northern Ireland's population of 22,616 during the past ten years. This fact is revealed by the preliminary statement of the census of population of Northern Ireland taken on the 28th February last. The total population of the six counties of Northern Ireland is 1,279,177, compared with 1,256,561 in 1926. The population is almost 29,000 higher than at the census in 1911.

The present population is made up of 623,050 males and 656,127 females, showing a surplus of 33,077 females over males. The largest increase in population has taken place in Belfast, where the increase exceeds the net increase of the province as a whole. The population of Belfast is now 437,824, an increase of 22,673. The population of the Borough of Londonderry has increased by 2,698 at 47,857. Both in Belfast and Londonderry the females exceed males, in the first case by 26,856, and in Londonderry by 3,099.

Three of the counties—namely, Antrim, Down and Londonderry—record increases, while the counties of Armagh, Fermanagh and Tyrone show decreases, the greatest contraction being in Tyrone, which has 5,233 fewer inhabitants.

PRICE OF BREAD

MUST NOT EXCEED 5½D. FROM BAKERS' SHOPS

The following statement was issued yesterday by the Department of Industry and Commerce:—

"The attention of the Minister for Industry and Commerce has been called to statements appearing in the Press of the 1st instant to the effect that in Dublin 6d. was being charged for the 2lb. loaf in retailers' shops.

"The position under Orders issued under the Bread (Regulation of Prices) Act, 1936, is that the maximum price which may be charged for batch bread sold in the shop of a retailer who is not a baker is 11½d. per 4lb. loaf. The price, therefore, for the 2lb. loaf may not exceed 5¾d.

"The maximum prices for batch bread sold by way of retail in a shop owned by a baker are 10¼d. per 4lb. loaf and 5¼d. per 2lb. loaf.

"It is an offence for any person to charge higher prices than the prices specified in this notice, and it is desired that persons who have paid higher prices, should communicate with this department forthwith."

NORTHERN BY-ELECTION

UNIONIST WALK-OVER IN BELFAST

From Our Correspondent.

BELFAST, Friday.

Councillor Fred Thompson, the official Unionist candidate, was declared elected without opposition for the Ballynafeigh Division of Belfast in the Northern Parliament. The vacancy was caused by the death of the Right Hon. Thomas Moles, M.P., Deputy Speaker of the Northern House of Commons.

There was a last minute surprise when Mr William M'Millan, representing the Independent Progressive Party and the Hauliers' Association, withdrew, giving the official Unionist a walk-over. The withdrawal followed negotiations with the Unionist Party representative, and after his election Councillor Thompson, M.P., said he had decided to look into all the details of the hauliers' case for better treatment by the Northern Transport Board.

Mr. M'Millan said he had withdrawn on the understanding that Councillor Thompson would take up their case and get redress for all 'bus owners and hauliers whose business had been acquired by the Board, and try to get employment for the men who had been displaced.

EIGHT DEAD IN RAIL CRASH

TRAINS COLLIDE ON BRIDGE

COACH ON EDGE OF PARAPET

DRIVER'S REMARKABLE ESCAPE

EIGHT persons, including two women, were killed and twenty injured in the collision between two Southern Railway electric trains near Victoria Station, London, during the morning rush hour yesterday.

Nine of the injured are detained in hospitals, several in a serious condition.

The names of the dead are:—

Guard Brooker, guard of the stationary train, Dorking;
Mrs. Agnes Dynes, Norbury;
Albert Edward Penny (50), New Malden;
C. R. Griffiths, New Malden;
R. L. Brown, Raynes Park;
G. R. Measures, Streatham; and
H. Malpass, Battersea.

Mrs. Maxwell-Lawford, who, with her husband, was one of the injured in Battersea General Hospital, died last night.

Captain Maxwell-Lawford was stated to be in a very critical condition. He is suffering from a fractured skull and leg injuries.

Mrs. Maxwell-Lawford was the daughter of Lady Jerred, Hampton Court Palace, widow of the late Sir Walter Jerred. Lady Jerred visited the hospital in the afternoon to see her son-in-law and daughter.

SCENE OF THE ACCIDENT

The accident occurred on a 60-foot viaduct. The front coach of the rear train smashed right through the rear coach of the stationary train.

One coach had its side ripped out; a second was pushed half-way into it, but was still upright on the metals; while a third was within an ace of being cannoned off the viaduct. It lay broadside on and badly telescoped on the edge of the parapet.

From this dazed passengers who had escaped injury scrambled on to the parapet itself and crawled along the narrow foothold.

Gangs of workmen armed with axes, police, railwaymen and others worked for hours in the incessant rain hacking their way through the wreckage to release the injured and the bodies of the dead.

Driver Arthur Anthony, the driver of the moving train, had a remarkable escape. He received head injuries, but insisted on returning to the scene. His head swathed in bandages, he worked unceasingly helping to liberate passengers. Then he went to hospital, where he will probably be detained only for twenty-four hours.

AN OFFICIAL INQUIRY

Colonel A. H. L. Mount, the Ministry of Transport Chief Inspecting Officer of Railways, visited the scene during the afternoon. He conducted an examination, and was accompanied by officials of the Southern Railway.

Colonel Mount will conduct the official inquiry into the disaster. It has been arranged that this should be opened on Wednesday next. The time and place of the inquiry has not yet been definitely arranged, although it is understood that the proceedings will probably be held at Waterloo Station.

STATEMENT BY COMPANY

Last night the Southern Railway issued the following official statement:—

"The Southern Railway greatly regret to announce that, owing to an accident at 8.5 a.m. to-day, between Battersea Park and Clapham Junction Stations, seven persons lost their lives, and 14 others were detained in hospital with injuries.

"The accident was caused by the 7.31 a.m. electric train from Coulsdon North to Victoria running into the rear of the 7.30 a.m. electric train from London Bridge to Victoria (via Tulse Hill).

"As a result of the accident all four running lines were blocked, and trains had to be terminated short of the accident.

"In consequence of the collision a short circuit occurred, with the result that current was cut off automatically. The momentary flash which always occurs in such circumstances may have been mistaken for fire, but in fact no fire of any sort took place.

"Normal working on all lines was resumed at about 5.30 p.m.

"An official inquiry is being held into the cause of the accident.

"The Southern Railway wish to express their sincere sympathy with all those involved in this unfortunate accident, and tender their gratitude to the police, ambulance workers, fire brigade, and the hospitals for the assistance that was forthcoming in such a remarkably short time."

CRICKET

M.C.C. V. AUCKLAND

AUCKLAND, Saturday.

It has been decided to draw stumps at 5 p.m. in the match between the M.C.C. and Auckland here to-day, the final day of the M.C.C.'s Australasian tour. The team will sail for England at 6 p.m.

Play was continued to-day, in sunny, but windy, weather, and on an easy pitch. Postles, the Auckland captain, was run out at 47, and Bush was fourth out at 51, caught by Copson at long-on off Verity.

Auckland—All out, 123.

WEEK-END WEATHER

Unsettled. Improving later.

DUBLIN PORT BOARD

VERY SUCCESSFUL YEAR

SURPLUS OF NEARLY £13,000

THE gross revenue received by the Dublin Port and Docks Board during 1936 amounted to £264,595 15s. 9d., and, with expenditure totalling £251,605 15s. 3d., there was a surplus of revenue over expenditure of £12,990 0s. 6d.

The accounts of the Board, which have just been issued, show that receipts from tonnage dues and dues on goods amounted to £184,081 9s. 7d. This represents an increase of £18,466 16s. 9d. as compared with the 1935 figure.

On the tonnage side it is disclosed that while the number of foreign vessels entering the port of Dublin fell from 653 in 1935 to 652 during last year, there was an increase in the registered tonnage from 831,009 tons to 872,993 tons; or 41,984 tons more. Cross-Channel and coasting vessels entering the port increased from 4,851, with a registered tonnage of 1,738,273 tons, to 5,113, (1,852,191 tons)—an increase of 262 vessels and 113,918 tons.

An examination of the total tonnage of goods imported and exported via Dublin shows that imports increased from 2,337,462 tons in 1935 to 2,476,865 tons last year, and exports went up from 451,216 tons to 450,185 tons. There was an advance from 1,181,804 to 1,230,835 tons in imports of general goods, and while over 70,800 tons of foreign coal was imported in 1935 in a total coal importation of 1,044,749 tons, all imports last year were from cross-Channel, the figure being 1,095,327 tons. Foreign exports of general goods fell from 47,376 tons in 1935 to 41,894 tons last year, but cross-Channel exports of general goods were about 16,000 tons greater last year than in 1935.

CATTLE TRADE

Greater numbers of sheep and cattle were exported last year. Sheep figures jumped from 199,287 in 1935 to 329,499 last year, and cattle went up from 348,609 to 408,514 head. Horses increased from 4,901 to 5,901, but pigs fell from 43,182 to 33,767. Generally the livestock exports last year were better than any in the last four years.

Tonnage duty in respect of oversea trade increased from £20,765 in 1935 to £31,020 in 1936; in respect of coasting trade, from £46,302 to £55,389, and passenger liners in the bay from £20 17s. 4d. to £243 10s. 6d. A new item of revenue in this category was £529 15s. 6d. in respect of tonnage dues on passenger liners alongside the quay.

Harbour maintenance last year cost £60,757 15s. 7d., as compared with £57,940 13s. 7d. in 1935.

GREYSTONES RATES INCREASED

RATEPAYERS' PROTEST MEETING

The indignation felt by the residents of Greystones, County Wicklow, because of the increase of 5s. in the rates of the district was expressed last night at a meeting in the Grand Hotel, Greystones. The opinion was put forward by many of the ratepayers who attended the meeting that the reason for the imposition of the increase was that the farmers were not paying land annuities to the Land Commission, in consequence of which the Government grant to the Wicklow County Council had been withdrawn. The rates for Greystones, it was stated, were fully paid up every year, and the ratepayers regarded the increase as a very serious matter. It was decided to form a Ratepayers' Association for the town and district.

HAIRDRESSERS' SHOPS

SUNDAY CLOSING IN DUBLIN

A meeting of the Irish Hairdressers' (Employers and Employés) Association was held on April 1st, Mr. J. O'Byrne presiding.

It was reported that, as a result of a plebescite of the hairdressing trade in Dublin, it had been found that 99 per cent. were in favour of Sunday closing.

The Chairman stated that complete Sunday closing had the unanimous support of the Master Hairdressers' Guild and the Irish Union of Hairdressers' Assistants.

On the motion of Mr. J. Wearen, seconded by Mr. G. Egan, it was unanimously decided that all hairdressing saloons in the city should be closed on Sundays on and after May 2nd.

It was also arranged to hold a general meeting of the trade to ratify this decision, and to ensure a 100 per cent. Sunday closing as from May 2nd.

Holding a dead rat, a boy chased Miss Emma Isabella Ball, a twenty-one years old shop assistant, of Cundy road, Custom House, London, when she was on Easter holiday at Orsett. She ran away, looking over her shoulder while crossing the road, and was knocked down by a car and killed. At the inquest yesterday a verdict of accidental death was recorded.

ELECTRICITY IN THE HOSPITAL

POSSIBILITIES OF CURING

INTERESTING LECTURE IN DUBLIN

MR. SEAN T. O'KELLY, Minister for Local Government and Public Health, presided at a lecture on "Electricity in the Hospital," which was given by Mr. Robert S. Whipple, M.I.E.E., F.Inst.P., in the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin, yesterday afternoon. The lecture was one of the Faraday series, promoted by the Irish Centre of Institute of Electrical Engineers, and which have been held at intervals throughout the winter.

THE DEMONSTRATIONS

The stage of the theatre seemed almost congested with electrical equipment, and the lecture was illustrated by demonstrations of much of the latest apparatus. The mysteries of infra red and ultra violet rays were explained on the screen by projecting a beam of light through a rare crystal prism, which decomposed the light into its component rays. Having done this the lecturer explained the properties of each ray, and demonstrated the instruments by which they are formed for the purposes of medicine. Dealing with X-Rays, the lecturer said that to obtain a clear picture of the inside structure of the body, 100,000 and even greater voltages are frequently necessary, and that at present an ultra sensitive instrument is in course of construction, which will require a "shot" of a million volts to take the required X-Ray picture.

Showing the use of an instrument on the stage, a demonstrator, by an exposure of less than three seconds, took a photograph of a hand, with the bone formation standing out in sharp relief.

When the first X-Ray photograph was taken about thirty years ago, the lecturer explained, the exposure took twenty minutes, and even then it was not of any material benefit.

Another demonstration was of bloodless surgery, an "operation" being performed on a piece of fresh, raw steak. By using an electrically heated lance, the blood vessels in the flesh are simultaneously sealed as the incision is made, and by performing the "operation" in a special demonstration cabinet the spectators were able to watch it, projected on the screen, largely magnified and in natural colours.

HIGH-FREQUENCY MACHINES

In the course of his lecture Mr. Whipple said that the applications of electricity in the hospital were many and were growing almost daily. A large hospital used a great deal of electrical energy. The Middlesex, a typically progressive London hospital, employed ten electricians, about 300 miles of wire in conduit had been installed, and there were more than 6,000 lighting points. The earliest applications of electricity in hospitals was at the end of the eighteenth century. In 1831 Faraday gave the world the means of producing electricity in bulk and of high intensity, and the medical induction coil was evolved on the basis of his work and that of others. One of the most important developments of therapeutical treatment by electricity was that of high-frequency machines in the treatment of nervous diseases. The effect of ultra-short wave treatment, he said, was only now becoming known. The possibilities of curing, or at least ameliorating, such complaints as abscesses and various forms of skin diseases were most promising.

An interesting exhibit was the electro-cardiograph, which, by responding to the variations of the electric current generated by the heart, enabled the doctor to diagnose its condition.

IRISH HOSPITALS

Mr. Sean T. O'Kelly, expressing thanks to the lecturer, referred to the great developments that had taken place in the Irish hospitals in recent years. New up-to-date hospitals were being erected all over the country, old ones were being reorganised and modernised, "and already," he said, "we have in the National Maternity Hospital in Merrion square one of the few completely electrical hospitals in Europe."

Humanity, he went on, owed a deep debt of gratitude to the men and nations who had undertaken the study of electricity. Its uses were now reflected in every side of surgical and medical treatment, but in no section had its wonderful uses been seen to greater advantage than in gynæcological work. Of all the advances made in medicine during the last fifty years none had been of greater use than the development and application of electrical science.

NEW KILKENNY SCHOOL

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

KILKENNY, Friday.

The blessing, dedication, and formal opening of a new school for the girls and infants of St. John's Parish, Kilkenny, took place to-day, the ceremony being performed by the Most Rev. Dr. Collier, Bishop of Ossory.

The new school, which cost approximately £9,000, portion of which is covered by a Government grant, is designed to accommodate 320 children.

ORDER TO PAY £2,500

OLYMPIC CHAMPION SUED

BOY INJURED AT A SPORTS MEETING

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

TIPPERARY, Friday.

AN accident at Mallow Garada sports, in which a boy spectator was severely injured as a result of being accidentally struck by a hammer used by Dr. Patrick O'Callaghan, the Irish Olympic champion, in a hammer-throwing event, had a sequel at Tipperary Circuit Court to-day.

The case came before Judge Sealy on appeal from a decision of the District Justice at Tipperary, who refused to make an instalment order against Dr. O'Callaghan in respect of a decree of the High Court for £2,500 in favour of the injured boy, Michael Joseph O'Callaghan, Mount Nagle, Mallow.

Mr. Walsh, for the injured boy, said that when proceedings were instituted against Dr. O'Callaghan defendant took up rather a peculiar attitude, never entering an appearance nor a defence, and never appearing on the several notices of motion that were served. He took up the attitude of letting the plaintiff do what he liked, and judgment went by default against him. One would have expected a man in Dr. O'Callaghan's position to take some steps in regard to this boy, who had received such frightful injuries, but no steps were taken to meet the judgment.

Dr. O'Callaghan stated that the committee of the Mallow sports were sued as defendants in the action in the High Court, but proceedings were discontinued against them, and judgment was given against witness.

Counsel—From the time the boy was injured up to the present, have you made the slightest inquiry about him?—I made several inquiries. I sent him to the hospital and visited him there.

You made no attempt to pay anything on foot of this debt?—No, because I could not.

You married a lady of considerable means?—That is not true.

Your wife had a private income?—She had £20 a year. She did not benefit under her late father's will.

Dr. O'Callaghan said that he had two children. He was at present Dispensary Medical Officer in Emly, where his salary was £250 a year, in addition to which he got £20 as Medical Officer of Health and £20 as National Health Insurance doctor. His private practice was worth about £26 a year.

Counsel—You say you only derive £26 a year from your private practice. Is it not well known that you are a very skilled doctor?—It is not well known. I think the fact of being prominent in any sport, particularly the form of sport in which I am concerned, would mitigate against one's practice. People seem to think that you are spending your whole time on sport and that you are not minding your practice. That is based upon experience.

Do you seriously suggest that you cannot hope for any better thing in this life than a dispensary practice that brings you in £250 a year and £26 for private practice?—I am hoping for better if things improve.

"LET DOWN"

Further questioned, the witness said that there were several debts which he had to meet. He denied that he had taken no interest in the High Court action, and said that he had employed a solicitor and had done various other things to meet the case; but, he added, "I was absolutely let down." He was paying a premium of £39 a year on an insurance policy of £1,000 payable on his death.

Would you be prepared to surrender that policy and pay the proceeds of it to the plaintiff?—I don't know. I have to provide for my wife and children.

Was your attitude at any time to pay one single penny?—I didn't make up my mind not to pay.

Would you pay at present if you could?—I would if the committee had said at that time to me: "You are partly responsible for this, and we will settle it, and will you stand in with us?" I would have done so.

Judge Seely—I feel sorry for the boy and sorry for Dr. O'Callaghan. Dr. O'Callaghan is really in a most tragic position over this debt. It is terrible to have this thing hanging over him for the rest of his life.

Dr. O'Callaghan said that he thought the Athletic Association were going to do something.

Judge Sealy—Have they any funds?

Dr. O'Callaghan—They have some small funds, but I think they are in a position to get funds.

Mr. Walsh—If the doctor will make any sort of reasonable offer we will meet him handsomely, but up to this his attitude had been a sort of sulky defiance.

Judge Sealy—I would not think so, from Dr. O'Callaghan's attitude here in court. He will have to make some provision for his creditors before he makes provision for his wife and family. I am sorry for him, but that is the legal position. I am not willing at present to make an order against Dr. O'Callaghan but I am not going to uphold the District Justice's decision. Dr. O'Callaghan's own behaviour in the matter is open to question, especially the fact that he got married after this judgment was given against him. However, his attitude in court has impressed me favourably, and I will adjourn my decision until next Court to see if he will do something in regard to the insurance policies. I feel that he ought to do something.

DERRY STRIKE NOTICES WITHDRAWN

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

LONDONDERRY, Friday.

The strike notices of one hundred Londonderry breadservers have been withdrawn, and the men will meet the master bakers on Thursday next to discuss the situation.

The notices were due to take effect to-morrow. The men are demanding an increase in their rates of remuneration.

TWO CHILDREN RESCUED

Two young boys—one aged two years and the other ten years—were rescued from the sea by a young man, Mr. Bobby Wilmot, Sidmonton avenue, Bray, on Thursday morning.

They were playing on the walls of the swimming pools at Bray Head with a third child when the younger fell into the sea and was drifting away. The eldest of the three children jumped into the water in an effort to save his young brother. Both of them were soon in difficulties.

Mr. Wilmot, who was some way up Bray Head, scrambled down the hillside and, fully clothed, went into the water. He succeeded in bringing both children to the shore. They were exhausted, but, after receiving medical attention from Dr. H. J. Bermingham, who was also on the scene, recovered sufficiently to be taken home and put to bed. Mr. Wilmot is a member of the Bray Cove Swimming Club.

INTERNATIONAL CHESS

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

MARGATE, Friday.

The Margate International Chess Congress was continued to-day, when the third round was played in the masters' tournament. Dr. Alekhine beat Tylor to recover some of his lost ground. Fine and Thomas drew, after a hard struggle. Paul Keres joins the leaders as a result of his win against Alexander. The leaders are: Fine, Thomas, and Keres, with 2½ points each.

Brian Reilly drew with Mieses in the premier reserves "C." Thomas Cox beat Lynch in major "B." In the same section O'Donovan beat J. J. Doyle. Doyle won his adjourned game against Miss Crum, Scotland. A de Burca, the Munster champion, drew with Steadman, England, whose first check in major "A" this was.

FROM "THE TIMES"

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT.)

SPAIN—ATTACK AND DEFENCE

The Times, in a leading article to-day, surveying the situation in Spain, says:—So far as it has gone the experience of the war in Spain has strongly supported the evidence of the Great War that the defence is paramount at present. This has added significance, because relatively small forces in vast areas offered the attack more scope and a better chance than it had on the closely packed Western front. There have been a few successes gained mainly by manœuvre. But offensives by either side have in general had small effect in proportion to their cost of life. And even when a local moral breakdown has momentarily cleared the attackers' path, experience has again confirmed that of the Great War in showing that conditions set a term to their Powers to exploit it. In taking the offensive each side was embarking on a venture whose tactical foundations were unsound and whose slender chance of any great effect lay in the psychological sphere—in the possibility that the opponents might be ripe for a moral collapse. Otherwise a heavy sacrifice of life, with little to show, was the probable result.

The original circumstances of the campaign—a military revolt against the Government—compelled General Franco to adopt an offensive strategy if he was to attain his aims. The extent to which his forces have pursued the offensive tactically would seem to have been more avoidable and more dangerous to his cause. On the other side the contrasting circumstances of a Government without an Army helped to produce a wiser tactical course, and this was long maintained. Its abandonment by the Government in February may be traced to later circumstances which were too strong for restraining calculation. Raw troops and mass levies are apt to lose moral when kept to the defensive, though it may be well suited to their conditions tactically. Even trained forces may falter if thus restrained unless they have been carefully taught that the highest art of soldiership lies in utilising the advantages which fire, defence and calculated withdrawal offer for entrapping the opponent.

None the less, the side which nowadays pins its hopes to attack courts the risk of undermining its own troops' moral in the effort. That risk has recently matured, first on the Government side and then on the other. Perhaps the most probable alternative to stalemate is that continued attacks may turn the scales of war against the attacking side. Either prospect offers little encouragement to those who will heed no talk of peace, and declare their relentless determination to pursue the struggle to the bitter end.

"IN THE POETS' PUB"

A B.B.C. BROADCAST

The poets and the pubs hit the high lights in the B.B.C. programme last night. They had only ten minutes in which to do it, and in normal experience that is too short a time to permit of either poet or pub to give of the best. But last night the tavern was of W. B. Yeats's imagining, and as the call of the round was his too, customers who listened in could smack their lips with satisfaction and withhold complaint on the score of quality. If they had reason to grumble it could only be because that, in keeping with the English practice, nobody could bang his pewter on the National's counter and call for the same again.

Perhaps there was no starring of the rafters. No matter—the company was good, the talk was good, the liquor was good, and the host was Yeats, with V. C. Clinton Baddeley to pour out the stuff.

MINE HOST

Mine host's was his own voice, the voice that long ago taught the Abbey Players how verse should be spoken. He would not have it delivered as dramatic dialogue. It should be treated as a form of music. Folk singers, he said, did without accompaniment, and had tricks of their own to compensate for that. Singers must keep within the reach of the voice, and, if they did not, they became mere musical instruments.

To illustrate this idea he had imagined a public-house in England such as he thought could be found in Dublin, in which musicians, poets, labourers, and famous people might meet. Last night they were there, and "everybody except me is English, and we are all a little drunk. We want to pound on tables with a tankard." The B.B.C. had substituted a drum, and he thought it would give "the cheers and the jeers" and the right quickness.

On the whole it did, but not always.

THE POEMS

The poems chosen by Mr. Yeats for Mr. Clinton Baddeley's delivery were: Belloc's "Do You Remember an Inn, Miranda?"; Chesterton's "Rolling English Road"; de la Mare's "Three Jolly Farmers"; Newbolt's "Drake's Drum"; Sylvia Townsend Warner's "The Sailor," and York Powell's "The Sailor and the Shark."

They were a good choice, and Mr. Baddeley and the drums—and a second voice—got the right atmosphere. But to Irish ears de la Mare and Newbolt and Miss Warner made no appeal. Unfortunately, only a couple of the Chesterton stanzas came across, and the Rolling Road has been done better in Dublin, in and out of bars, by poets not unknown to Mr. Yeats. Mr. Yeats may be right when he says that "Drake's Drum" is one of the few great poems in English, but last night it did not sound just that.

Between them, however, Mr. Yeats and Mr. Baddeley gave us a glorious deoch a' dorius. His reminiscences of his brother and York Powell and the "Victualler's Gazette" was perfect. The delighted listened could well believe him when he said: "York Powell would have been at home in just such a pub as I have imagined." Mr. Baddeley rose to the occasion, we heard "the great storm winds blow," but did not fear them. We smelt of the fish of the sea, the lads came in like a chorus. This had the robust sound of the pub.

BOYS' BRIGADE INSPECTION

The 37th annual inspection and gymnastic display by the 32nd Dublin Company of the Boys' Brigade was held in the Abbey Lecture Hall, Lower Abbey street, Dublin, last night, in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends of the boys.

The Very Rev. J. L. Morrow, M.A., D.D., president of the company, presided, and Mr. T. J. Lewis, former captain, was the inspecting officer.

The programme opened with the general salute, and, following the inspection and march past the company, at a strength of 23 boys and 6 officers, gave a finished display of platoon, squad, and life-saving drill, physical training, with parallel bars, pyramid, and vaulting horse.

The inspecting officer complimented the officers and boys on their splendid turn-out, their smart, stylish appearance and bearing.

Mrs. Lewis presented the company awards amid applause.

During the programme, musical selections were rendered by the band of the 14th Dublin Company, by kind permission of Mr. C. G Bannister.

Queen Maud of Norway, who landed at Newcastle-on-Tyne yesterday from the Norwegian mail boat Venus, is the first of the Royal visitors to the Coronation to arrive. Queen Maud, with a lady-in-waiting, left by car for Sandringham.

ACHILL SCHOOL STRIKE

TEACHERS CONDEMN TWO DEPARTMENTS

CLOSE OF THE CORK CONGRESS

FROM OUR REPORTER.

CORK, Friday.

CONDEMNATION of two Government Departments for their attitude in the recent Achill school strike was unanimously expressed by 500 delegates at the final session of the Irish National Teachers' Congress here to-day. The outgoing President, Mr. D. F. Courell, presided.

In private session this morning, on the motion of Achill Branch, Congress passed the following resolution: "That pressure be brought to bear on the responsible authorities to have the School Meals (Gaeltacht) Act operated in accordance with the terms and conditions set out in the statute."

Later, in the public session, a resolution submitted by the Standing Orders Committee was unanimously carried, expressing condemnation of the Departments of Justice and of Education for their failure to ensure to the teachers of Achill the conditions necessary to the carrying out of their normal school duties. "Further, we view with deep concern the action of the Local Government Department in allowing the County Mayo Board of Health to divert from the terms of the statute governing the operation of the School Meals Act in An Saorstat."

Congress placed on record its pledge of support for the teachers of Achill "in their resistance to the infringement of their rights."

Moving the resolution, Mr. C. P. Murphy (Cork) said that it had been regretted that the original motion had been taken in private. They wished the people of this country to know, through the Press, that they were determined to stand behind their fellow-teachers in Achill, and that they were prepared to give them moral and financial support. (Applause.)

Mr. J. Bohan (Leitrim) seconded.

WHILE IN GAELTACHT

Without discussion Congress resolved to demand that children from national schools selected by Coisde na bPaisdi to spend a month in the Gaeltacht should be marked "present" on the roll of the national school to which they belonged on the days during which the school was in operation. It was also agreed to request that teachers in the Gaeltacht who taught all subjects through the medium of Irish should receive extra remuneration, similar to that now being paid to teachers in the Fior-Gaeltacht.

The following resolutions were agreed to:—That books and requisites be supplied free to necessitous children; that the Department be responsible for the payment of a substitute during the absence of a teacher owing to illness; that in order that all school children in the Free State would benefit by the present educational broadcasts, the State should supply a radio set, licence free, to each school; that Congress demands exemption from the marriage rule for those teachers who had entered a preparatory college before the rule was adopted.

It was unanimously requested, also without discussion, that the whole cost of erection, reconstruction, equipment, repair and maintenance (including heating and cleaning) of national schools be met from public funds, and that all schools be provided with suitable playing fields and an adequate supply of pure water.

When Congress was asked to decide where it would meet next year there were loud cries of "Achill, Achill," and, amid laughter, the matter was referred to the C.E.C.

Mr. Sean O'Grady (incoming President) then took the chair.

TROJAN WORK

Voting thanks to Mr. Courell, outgoing President, Mr. P. W. Palmer (Kenmare) said that he had done trojan work for the National teachers during his year of office. When he had come into office he had laid down and conducted a campaign in an endeavour to win for them the two big demands—salary and security. While he did not achieve the final victory, he had brought them to the border-line of what they hoped would be the eventual triumph.

Mr. P. O'Hagan (Dublin), seconding, associated Mrs. Courell with the vote.

Mr. John Bohan (Leitrim) and Mr. L. Sheridan (Dungannon) spoke to the vote, which was conveyed by Mr. O'Grady and passed with acclamation.

Mr. Courell returned thanks.

Mr. C. P. Murphy, proposing a vote of thanks to the Press, said that they realised to the fullest the influence of the Press. No matter how fierce a campaign they waged, it would come to nothing was it not for the newspapers, which always had treated them with fairness in the amount of space devoted to them, and in the way which their staffs reported their business. Mr. E. Delaney (Tipperary) seconded.

Congress concluded with a vote of thanks to the Cork Committee.

The delegates attended a ceilidhe in the City Hall at night.

During the week many of the delegates and their visitors from England, Wales and Scotland inspected Ford's motor works and Messrs. Dwyer's.

FEIS SHLIGIGH

IRISH LANGUAGE AND DANCING

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

SLIGO, Friday.

Competitions in the Irish language were the feature of Feis Shligigh here to-day.

Comhradh (for children under 14 years)—1, Una Ni Tuainisg, Sligo; 2, Taitriona Nic Enri, Sligo; 3, Teresa Nic Enri, Sligo, and Cait Ni Gradaig, Carrick.

Sinnsear—1, Annie Gilmartin, Sligo.

Senior Flute—1, J. Reynolds, Ballinakill; 2, T. Gallagher, Ballymote; 3, T. Cullen, Keash. Four competed.

Ceilidh Singing (open to all Ireland)—1, The Bundoran Singers—the only entrants.

Ceilidh Band competition—1, James P. Flynn's Band, Boyle; 2, Sligo Ceilidh Quintet.

Aithrisioracht (for children under 14 years)—1, Aileen Harte, Sligo; 2, Cait Ni Gradaig, Carrick, and Mary Rose Harte, Sligo; 3, Padraigin Ni Ceallacain, Carrick, and Annie McGrath, Sligo.

Aithrisioracht (for competitors under 17 years)—1, Bernadette Connolly, Sligo; 2, Caithlin Ni Fionain, Sligo; 3, Margaret Verdon, Sligo.

Junior Single Jig (for children under 13 years)—1, Peggy Gilmore, Sligo; 2, B. J. McMorrow, Sligo; 3, Annie Slattery, Sligo, and May McCoy, Bundoran; 4, Olive Mullaney, Gurteen.

Intermediate Slip Jig and Double Jig (for competitors under 15 years)—1, Anna Dorrian, Ballyshannon; 2, Vera Morrison, Castle Baldwin, Co. Sligo; 3, May Gillespie, Ballyshannon; 4, Ellin Gallagher, Bundoran.

In the competition for Junior Plays in Irish the Marist Brothers' boys presented "An Strainseir," and St. Vincent's Ursuline National School staged "An Oidche Nodhlag."

Hundreds had to be turned away at night, as the Assembly Room was crowded out. The big attraction on the programme was the staging of "The Jailbird" by the Sligo Unknown Players, in the English Drama competition. They were defending their record of never having been beaten in open competition.

The adjudication in all the dramatic competitions will be given to-morrow night.

Mary Mulcahy Cup (open to all Ireland) for the Junior Championship in Dancing—1, Miss Mary Temple, Galway (245½ marks); 2, May Rennick, Sligo (245 marks); 3, May Gillespie, Ballyshannon (244 marks); very highly commended, Annie Dorrian, Ballyshannon.

FROM THE NORTHERN CAPITAL

Dominion Status : Financial Adjustments : The Budget Surplus : Flax Problem : A Technical University

FROM OUR BELFAST CORRESPONDENT.

TWO speeches delivered during Eastertide are of special interest to Northern Ireland; for they deal with subjects which have assumed considerable importance in recent months.

They were made by Captain the Right Hon. Herbert Dixon, M.P., and Mrs. Parker, O.B.E., M.P., at the laying of foundation stones of an Orange Hall near Ballyclare. Both deprecated suggestions that Northern Ireland should seek either Dominion status or adjustments in the financial relations with Great Britain.

Captain Dixon advised that they "should not divert one iota from the 1920 Act, because, if you do, you are in the box." "Some of the Independent members of our Parliament," he said, "are crying out for Dominion status. You are in under the 1920 Act," he added, "and while you are there you are safe."

On several occasions I have pointed out the futility of seeking Dominion status for Northern Ireland, particularly as Great Britain has ceased to be a Free Trade country. The only claim put forward for Dominion status is that home industries could be fostered by a tariff; but, so far as Northern Ireland is concerned, that would not be an advantage comparable to the great advantage which its manufacturers and shipyards now secure of getting in on the "ground floor" in the British market, and a free run of a market of 40,000,000 people for its agricultural produce. No right to levy tariffs on British goods could compensate for even the partial loss of that advantage in the opinion of every commercial organisation in Northern Ireland.

Dominion status for Northern Ireland would need to be accompanied by a Free Trade agreement for the mutual exchange of goods without tariff barriers, and that would spoil any attraction which some would see in Dominion status. If Northern Ireland were a Dominion it would have to provide an army of its own, or make some fixed payment as a contribution to imperial defence. Such a fixed payment would be less advantageous than the present imperial contribution arrangement, adjusted in relation to Northern Ireland's surplus revenue. Whatever alterations, if any, may be necessary in the future, as in the past, in the financial relations between Northern Ireland and Great Britain, Dominion status for Northern Ireland does not appear to be desirable.

Financial Adjustments

Both Mrs. Parker and Captain Dixon, however, were less happy when they were dealing with "financial adjustments" with Great Britain.

Mrs. Parker, M.P., who not infrequently dogmatises on questions of high policy, said: "I wish to warn the people of loyal Ulster that those in our midst who wish to make financial adjustments or changes in their relations with Great Britain are playing a very dangerous game." One would imagine that the financial relations between Northern Ireland and Great Britain in the United Kingdom are unalterable like "the laws of the Medes and Persians." Mrs. Parker forgets that under the Government of Ireland Act it was stipulated that Northern Ireland was to pay nearly eight million sterling per annum as Imperial contribution. That little financial arrangement was not merely "adjusted," but thrown completely overboard!

The Colwyn Committee, working on the basis of the White Paper for a standard year expenditure, made a new "financial adjustment." No member of the Government party ever described that "financial adjustment" as a dangerous game. In fact, it was lauded to the sky. The only fault with it, as I pointed out before, is that it assumed that Northern Ireland would always have a surplus revenue.

Several years it had not, but had to balance its Budget from reserves and Road Fund raids. At present it has a substantial surplus of nearly half a million, and possibly more next year, but there is no guarantee that this will continue if the incidence of taxation is altered by a Budget at Westminster and if social service expenditure further increases. Another "financial adjustment" which also won the applause of Mrs. Parker and other Government back-benchers was the re-insurance agreement which saved the Government of Ireland Act finance from a collapse. Even that further adjustment, however, was not quite effective, and a second re-insurance agreement was negotiated. It is very doubtful if even this third "financial adjustment" is perfect. Time will tell.

At any rate, it would be more perfect if Northern Ireland had not to shoulder twenty-five per cent. of the cost, but if the whole cost was regarded as a national charge on the Central Exchequer of the United Kingdom and that twenty-five per cent. taken out in higher Imperial contribution, if available, after Northern Ireland got its rights to equivalent expenditure on its services and reliefs to those in Great Britain. When Mrs Parker declared: "We must stand together and not only defeat the traitors within our gates but the enemy in front of us," it is to be hoped that she did not include as "traitors" the Prime Minister, the Minister of Finance, and the Minister of Labour, who negotiated these "financial adjustments," not in the original Government of Ireland Act. If not, why should it be "traitorous" to suggest other financial adjustments not opposed to the Government of Ireland Act, which would ensure for the people of Northern Ireland greater equality with the people of Great Britain in the one United Kingdom?

Budget Surplus

The Northern Ireland Exchequer return of revenue and expenditure for the financial year just closed shows a surplus of £54,950, the largest for seven years. There are several gratifying features in the return and some which are not so satisfactory.

The total revenue at £11,596,818 is up by £638,948, including slight increases in estate duties, stamp duties, Excise and motor duties, while the residuary share of the reserved taxes levied at Westminster and collected in Northern Ireland at £7,357,000 shows an increase of £906,000. Increases in expenditure and an imperial contribution of £400,000 (provisional figure) reduces the net surplus to £54,950. The local contribution to education services is £145,649, and the increase of income tax due to revaluation, roughly £250,000, accounts for a total equivalent to the imperial contribution, while Exchequer grants to local authorities show a reduction of about £68,000. When these facts are taken into consideration the surplus of £54,590 is not so attractive at it seems on paper. The cost of unemployment insurance and employment services jumped by over £277,000 to a total of £3,037,910, and, in view of Northern Ireland's excess unemployment in relation to the unemployment in Great Britain, the Imperial Government had to contribute £1,039,000 to the Northern Unemployment Equalisation Fund under the unemployment agreement.

While this is satisfactory from the point of view of the Northern Exchequer, it is not indicative of that healthy state of "property" in Northern Ireland that the Minister of Finance regards as satisfactory. In Great Britain the Unemployment Fund is "paying its way" by the normal contributions and statutory Exchequer grants to meet claims for benefit. In Northern Ireland this is not so by reason of the excess unemployment figure of between 70,000 and 80,000; but the Unemployment Fund is kept in a state of parity with the British Unemployment Fund by extra Exchequer grants, which, in the case of the British contribution, this year reaches the large sum of over one million sterling.

The Flax Problem

The increase in the world demand for flax fibres is causing serious concern to linen trade experts, in view of the dependence of this country upon imported supplies. Not only is there a demand for linen fabric for aeroplanes, but linen buyers have realised that prices of goods are likely to increase in the near future, and they have rushed in to buy available stocks and place more orders where delivery of these can be guaranteed within a reasonable time.

There has been also a remarkable demand in recent months for cambric and fine cloth generally, and along with it there is a notable scarcity of flax in quality good enough to be used for making such fine cloth. The total acreage under flax in Northern Ireland last year was 25,378, which produced 4,759 tons. The Irish Free State crop was 5,118 acres, producing less than 800 tons. There is a market in the Northern Ireland linen industry for ten times the Irish flax yield. It would require 300,000 acres under flax to make Northern Ireland and Great Britain independent of imported supplies, and at a moderate estimate nearly £3,000,000 could be added to the agricultural income by flax-growing. Great Britain only produces about 6,000 tons of flax, while flax production in Germany was doubled last year to 30,000 tons. France pays a subsidy to flax-growers, and Italy and other European countries are vigorously stimulating production. Russia is developing its flax manufacturing industries, and less fibre may be exported in the near future. The British Empire uses 10 per cent. of the world's flax supply, but, notwithstanding that it controls one-fourth of the surface of the globe, it only produces one per cent. of the flax required for the British linen manufacturing industries. Northern Ireland is endeavouring to stimulate flax production by the development of pedigree seed, and in a measure is succeeding; but the production could be increased to a much greater extent by a well-devised flax production and marketing scheme. All interested in linen and flax production in Ireland should realise that there is a £3,000,000 market at their door going begging.

Technical University

The idea of elevating the Belfast Municipal College of Technology into a technical university for Northern Ireland is one that has much to commend it. The suggestion was put forward by the Chairman of the Belfast Education Committee at the Conference of the Ulster Teachers' Union. In reality the Belfast Technical College already is the main centre for advanced technical instruction, but the proposal to establish it as a higher technical college, in co-ordination with the technical schools of the province, is one worth serious consideration.

At present the main cost of the college is borne by the ratepayers of Belfast, but the Government, as a small retribution for the education levy, might shoulder some more of the burden and spread the advantages afforded by the college over a wide area for the benefit of commercial, technical and art students. There appears to be little possibility of industries expanding in Northern Ireland by outside assistance. It is all the more necessary that every encouragement should be given to expand industries from resources within the province, and no better way of doing so could be found than developing technical training. There is no reason why a woollen industry and a motor industry should not be developed in Northern Ireland, as Alderman Lyle Hall pointed out, in addition to the new aircraft industry, which it is hoped may become as famous in the future as that other industry associated with the name of Harland—shipbuilding. Belfast has a highly skilled industrial population, capable, if trained, to engage in any engineering or manufacturing industry.

HAROLD'S CROSS CHURCH

CENTENARY CELEBRATIONS

The parishoners are entering with great enthusiasm into the celebration of the centenary of the parich church of Harold's Cross, Dublin, which occurs this year.

Built originally as a capel-of-ease to St. Catherine's, Harold's Cross became a parish in its own right in 1903. Forty years ago it was a fashionable centre of Protestant life in Dublin, and crowded congregations used to assemble each Sunday to worship in this church. The name of the then Rector, the Rev. W. B Askin, is still well remembered by many. To-day numbers are much smaller, but enthusiasm seems to be higher than ever, for the parishioners have voluntarily subscribed a sum nearly reaching four figures for the complete reconstruction and electrification of the organ during the past year. This is a very notable achievement indeed, and it was inaugurated through the inspiration of the late Rector, the Rev. C. C. W. Duggan, B.D. An energetic organ committee, which was formed at the time, have carried out the original plan, the parishioners recently subscribing anew to complete the fund out of memory and respect for him who had inaugurated it. They are also erecting a beautiful brass tablet associating Mr. Duggan's memory for all time with this great achievement.

To celebrate the centenary, and to display the qualities of the new organ, the choir are rendering the Easter music from the Messiah on Wednesday next. Their numbers have been augmented by outside friends, and the whole is now in excellent control under the able management of the organist, Miss Muriel Graham. Professor T. H. Weaving, who has given the organ committee the benefit of his advice all along, is putting the finishing touches to the production so that a highly gratifying performance should result. The soloists are Miss Bertha Dungan, Miss Hilda Tomsohn, Mr. Robert McCullagh and Mr. Frank Cowle. The performance will be broadcast.

On Wednesday week (April 14th) there will be an organ recital by Professor Weaving.

MASTER BAKERS MEET

PROGRESS OF GUILD

At a meeting of the Council of the Saorstat Guild of Master Bakers at 28 Upper O'Connell street, Dublin, Mr. M. J. O'Connor, Secretary, reported substantial progress since the formation of the Guild recently, a number of new members being admitted to membership from different parts of the country.

The question of holding meetings in suitable centres, so as to get into direct touch with the members, was considered, and a meeting was fixed for Limerick, the arrangements for it being left in the hands of the Secretary and the Secretary of the Limerick and District Master Bakers' Association.

A draft of the rules governing the Guild was submitted, and gone through and adopted.

A vote of sympathy was passed to the relatives of the late Mr. S. C. Cope, Castledermot, a member of the Guild.

AN INTERESTING RECITAL

JEAN NOLAN AND FREDERICK STONE

A song and piano recital of exceptional interest will be given by Jean Nolan and Frederick Stone on Tuesday evening, April 20th, in the Aberdeen Hall, Gresham Hotel, Dublin. As a song interpreter, Miss Nolan has an established reputation in Ireland, and she has also given recitals in America, Paris and London. Frederick Stone, the brilliant Dublin pianist, now holds the important position of pianist and accompanist to the B.B.C. in Belfast. The critics are enthusiastic in their praise of his playing. Miss Kitty O'Doherty will be Miss Nolan's accompanist. A programme of unusual interest is promised. Messrs. Pigott are in charge of the booking.

GOSSIP FROM THE COURSE

FILLIES IN THE DERBY

The Cases of Signorinetta and Sceptre Recalled

FROM OUR TRAVELLING CORRESPONDENT.

LONDON, Friday Night.

THE racing of the last few days having been entirely flat, the one item of news that seemed to interest the public was the fact that, after the second declaration of forfeit for the Derby of this year, only one filly has been left in the race. This is Sir John Jarvis's Gainsborough Lass, who remains in with seventy-seven colts.

I suppose it would be a nine days' wonder now if a filly were to win the Derby, and, yet, it is not so long ago—only a quarter of a century—that one, the grey Tagalie, did. Owners never seem to think nowadays of running a filly in the Derby, and not everyone could name off hand the last of the sex he saw at Epsom.

Won Derby and Oaks

The most extraordinary case of a filly winning the Derby is, of course, that of Signorinetta, who had hardly been heard of before the Derby, and, yet, she came out again two days later and also won the Oaks. She had never been much good before, and she was never any good again, for she never won another race, and when she went to the stud she had no success. How she came to win the Derby and Oaks is, perhaps, the greatest of all mysteries connected with horse racing.

The Greatest of All

The best filly that ran in the Derby in the lifetime of the present generation was, of course, Sceptre, who won all the other classic races, but could only finish fifth behind Ard Patrick. She was a very unfortunate filly to have been foaled in the same season as the late Mr. John Gubbins's Smasher, otherwise she would have established a record that might have stood for ever.

Gainsborough Lass will have to improve a good deal on her form of last season to have a chance against the best of the colts, for she was not even the best of her own sex, and none of them rose much above mediocrity.

Selections

It is a modest programme down for decision to-morrow at Alexandra Park, where the London Sprint Handicap should be won by SHALFLEET, the Alexandra Handicap may go to KANS, and the Spring Maiden Plate to CAMERON LAD.

GALTEE MORE.

BRUMMELL BEST BET

Ballywellbroke Gets Vote for London Sprint

ALEXANDRA PARK, the popular North London course, begin their season with an interesting programme to-day. The main event is the London Sprint Handicap, which, as the name implies, is run over five furlongs. Some speedy horses have been entered, and the race gives the appearance of being an extremely open affair.

The consistent and good-looking mare, Ballywellbroke ran eleven times last year, and although only winning twice she was closely concerned with the finish on several occasions. Her last race was in the Birmingham Cup, over seven furlongs, where she finished fourth to Pricket in a field of nineteen.

It is possible that Ballywellbroke is seen to better advantage over a longer distance than that of to-day's contest. I remember her showing good speed with over 9st. in the saddle to win the five furlongs Empire Stakes from Wyndham at Newbury last June. She has been especially sharpened up for the London Sprint Handicap. She went better than the speedy Lady of Shalott in a fast five furlong gallop recently, and my vote here is for

BALLYWELLBROKE.

Shalfleet is set to carry top weight—17lb. more than Ballywellbroke. Although he must be treated with respect, I think he may have been given too much to do. His sole success last season was in the valuable Portland Stakes, at Doncaster, where he beat some of the best sprinters in training, including Solerina and Rosemary's Pet, who incidentally were the only two to give him weight on that occasion.

Trawos met with bad luck in the running at Lincoln. She may have derived benefit from that outing. I think Stanley Wootton's charge may be seen to better advantage later in the year. Unlikely appears to be fairly leniently treated. Briscoe's Patball is fancied and I think he may gain a place.

Slap and Tickle created a surprise last July when she beat Solerina by a short head over six furlongs at headquarters, but she has never lived up to that form since. Stefan of Chichester and Eta can be fancied with their light weights. Of the pair I prefer Eta.

Tha three I like best in the Alexandra Handicap are Samarkand, Fedor, and Knight of Monaster. I recommend as the winner.

The seven-years-old showed up well in Queen's Shilling's race over a slightly longer distance at Liverpool. He only gave way in the last furlong, which makes me think the shorter distance will be a point in his favour to-day.

Fedor and Samarkand both ran creditably when unplaced to Incendiaire at Kempton last Saturday. Fedor finished just behind Samarkand then, and now has a 10lb. pull in the weights. It must be noted that Samarkand has run well over the course in the past, and divided Mildoria and The Font here last October.

The best bet of the day may be in the last event, the Spring Maiden Plate. Brummell, I understand, has been galloping with Solar Bear, the Queen's Prize winner. He was placed on six occasions last year, but did not manage to get first past the post throughout the season. An opportunity to do so is afforded him to-day. J. Jarvis can run either Cameron Lad or Port Sunlight. Whichever is selected must be respected.

Not much is known of the youngsters in the Enfield Plate. I have heard good reports concerning H. Smyth's Loyalty, who has impressed at Epsom. Knight's Armour has had the benefit of a race in public. He is taken as the danger to LOYALTY.

The Juvenile Selling Plate, which failed to fill and was re-opened, has now attracted fifteen entries. I think H. Fmyth may register a two-years-old double by winning this race with

SUPERINTENDENT BOUTALL.

The Priory Selling Handicap may be won by

from the same stable.

The main event at the second stage of the Catterick Bridge meeting is the Grove Handicap, showed up well over ten furlongs at Lincoln, after a bad draw. He may follow the example of Swiftsure at this meeting yesterday, and make amends for his failure on the Carholme by winning this race.

SO SORRY

Fine Romance ran second to Markaway gelding at Nottingham. In the light of Markaway gelding's subsequent success, receives a confident vote for the Richmond Two Years Old Plate.

FINE ROMANCE

LEOPARDSTOWN PROGRAMME

FIRST BIG RACE FOR JUVENILES

Events Under Both Rules in an Interesting Card

THERE is no lack of variety about the programme to be submitted to patrons of the Leopardstown meeting this afternoon; for it embraces all three branches of the sport, with flat racing predominating. The Tote Double on Third and Fifth Races.

Foxrock Plate is the first valuable two years old race of the season, and, with a field of twelve runners likely to go to the post, there is ample material for an interesting race.

All except Alcoran will be making a first appearance on a racecourse, so that naming the winner is mostly a matter of speculation. Miss Nova is the sole representative of P. Behan's stable, and if she is better than Light Fantastic, who scored so easily at the Phœnix Park last Saturday, it will take a good two years old to beat her. Coerced, a stable companion of Sedan, who also won at the Phœnix Park, may be the danger.

The Tower Hurdle Race is an open affair. Sir Jonah, who is at the top of the handicap, won his last two races, and seems to be again at the height of his form, so that the task set him here may not be too much. Mahoonagh and Nanki Poo are others with claims to consideration, but Sir Jonah is preferred.

Lizzie's Nephew, who won over the course a fortnight ago; Magnum II., Jorto and Moydrum are the pick of those in the Dundrum Steeplechase, and Magnum II., who was second to Tom Lynom in a flat race at Phœnix Park, may go one better now.

Maxina, the winner of the Ward Union Hunt Cup at Fairyhouse, will again be opposed by Odd Man Out in the Hunters' Steeplechase, and even at the altered weights should win again.

Glanlough and Corrib Lady may renew their battle over this course last November, as both are in the Leopardstown Plate, and, as Glanlough should have made the greater improvement since then, she may win again.

Resorcine ran well enough behind Tom Lynom and Magnum II. at the Phœnix Park to suggest that she must hold a big chance in the Corinthian Plate. Selections:—

Tower Hurdle Race—Sir Jonah.
Dundrum Steeplechase—Magnum II.
Foxrock Plate—Miss Nova.

HUNTING

KILDARE HOUNDS

These hounds finished their season on Thursday. The meet was at Ballyhook, and, finding in Glenduff, we ran through Mr. Manly's farm by Molyneux bog into Tynte Park, hounds being stopped near Tourant. Then came a very good hunt from Tynte Park by Tourant, right-handed over the road near Dunlavin town, and, with Cryhelp on the left, the line went close to Copelands, and through Merginstown, before leaving left-handed by Arlingstown, then the Blessington road to Holywood Glen, and, going up the mountains, this good fox beat hounds after one hour and twenty minutes, the last half-hour being very fast.

MEATH HOUNDS

From the meet at Carlanstown on Thursday hounds found first in Farran Alcock, but the quarry ran only a few fields before getting to ground. The wild gorse just outside the covert was then tried, and, finding at once, hounds ran through Newtown and Bellair, where the fox turned right-handed past the bog and carried on by Curraghtown to Horath, where he got in after a nice hunt of thirty-five minutes. A Robertstown fox got to ground after going a short distance, and one in Rathmanoe declined to leave. Cruicestown and Brittas were drawn blank, and nothing more was done.

Yesterday found hounds at Tobertynan, and they began by drawing the covert there, and the Bog of Kill blank. They found on Clonacurry Hill, and after some delay the fox went away over the road and into the Bog of Kill, which he left on the far side, pointing for Rathmolyon, but swinging to the right, ran on to Killballyporter, where they pulled him down in the open. A couple of local rings with a fox in Rahinston gorse was followed by a good thirty minutes from Rathmolyon. This fox led across the furry hill, past Rathmolyon village, and on by Pagestown and Regan's mill nearly to Tobertynan, then through the Bog of Kill, and was lost when going in the direction of Clonacurry. A couple of rings from Moneymore finished one of the worst scenting days of the season.

GOLF

THE SUNNINGDALE FOURSOMES

A REMARKABLE RUN OF SINGLE PUTTS

Dai Rees (Surbiton), assistant unofficial match-play champion, with his amateur partner, A. S. Anderson, gave a magnificent display of putting to reach the semi-finals of the Sunningdale open mixed foursomes tournament at Sunningdale yesterday.

In the fourth round they beat E. H. Moss and Sam King (Knole Park) by 4 and 3. They started with a single putt on the first three greens, holed the first nine in 33 for a lead of 2, and had only twenty putts on the fifteen holes played.

In the semi-final round to-day Rees and Anderson oppose C. Rissik and E. W. Kenyon (Beaconsfield), the other match being R. B. Foster and Archie Compston (Coombe Hill) v. D. G. Hannay and R. G. French (Berkshire).

THE RUGBY INTERNATIONAL

IRELAND FACED WITH DIFFICULT TASK

Backs May Turn Scale in Favour of Home Country

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Friday.

ALTHOUGH the postponement of the Wales v. Ireland match has somewhat detracted from its appeal to the public, the stand tickets had all been disposed of, and there are ten thousand Welsh supporters making the journey out of the original twelve thousand booked for the first date.

While there is no great issue at stake, the game may turn out to be the best of the season's series. Wales experienced rather bad luck in their opening game against England, and, instead of losing by a point, might easily have won. Had they done so, the team would probably have been left as it was for the Scottish match, and that the selectors made a mistake when making changes was proved by their calling back men like Vivian Jenkins and Claude Davey for this game. Jenkins, unfortunately, cannot play, but W. G. Legge, of Newport, who replaces him, is said to be a sound player.

WELSH CONFIDENCE

There is great confidence behind the side, and Ireland is going to be set a stern task to win. If the new forward formation, with its infusion of youth, has the desired effect of making for better scrummaging, probably all will be right, but it is not going to be an easy game to win. Given a fair share of the ball from the scrummages, however, the back division—the most effective attacking force in the four countries—should give Ireland victory.

NO FURTHER CHANGES

The Welsh team arrived in Belfast this morning, having travelled via Liverpool, and no further changes are announced. There had been some doubt about Claude Davey, who was injured, but he has completely recovered, and was out at practice at Ormeau this afternoon. The forwards of the Welch Regiment, the Army Cup holders who are stationed at Belfast, turned out and gave the Welsh international pack some scrummage practice, while the reserve players were out with the others.

The Welsh reserves are T. O. James (Aberavon), full-back; A. Bassett, wing; H. O. Edwards, Centre, and W. Morgan, half-back, all of Cardiff, and C. J. Anderson, of Maesteg, who was to have played in the postponed match, but has now to stand down as Trevor Williams is fit. The forwards will pack in this order:—

Williams, Travers, Bennett, front row.
H. Thomas, H. Rees, second row.
Watkins, Taylor and A. M. Rees, back row.

The Irish reserves are C. J. Graves, S. Deering, J. C. Martin and J. A. Esler (Queen's). All the Irish players and reserves, as well as a scratch pack of North and Queen's players, turned out at Ormeau after the Welsh team had finished, and while the forwards were engaged perfecting their scrummage methods A. H. Bailey practised place kicking.

IRISH TEAM AT BANGOR

The weather is dull and cold, and there is a threat of rain. The Welshmen are staying at the Grand Central Hotel and the Irish are at Bangor. Wales will have plenty of support from the military stationed in Northern Ireland; for in addition to the Welch Regiment at Victoria Barracks, the South Wales Borderers are stationed at Londonderry, and there are cheap excursions from all parts of the province to Belfast.

One of the Welsh reserves was Sergeant Owen, of the Welch Regiment, who had been chosen for the Army against the Royal Air Force. The Army authorities offered to release him if required, but they were informed that it was not necessary and he could stay in London and play.

AMATEUR BOXING

DUGGAN SHIELD FINAL

Connacht Defeats Ulster By Five Events to Three

GALWAY, Friday Night.

OVER two thousand enthusiasts packed the Pavilion, Salthill, last night, for the Duggan Shield final between Ulster and Connacht. It was Connacht's first appearance in the final. When the teams were introduced the Ulstermen received a tremendous ovation.

FLY-WEIGHT

W. Brown (Ulster) beat M. Furey (Connacht).

Brown kept poking in his left in the first round, but Furey countered with some grand right hooks. Furey held his own well in the first four rounds, but in the last two Brown was the superior, and got the verdict, though it must have been a near thing.

BANTAM-WEIGHT

D. McAllister (Ulster) beat P. Naughton (Connacht).

McAllister was all over Naughton in the opening round, and a couple of right jabs dazed the Connacht lad. Both were warned for holding, but McAllister did some grand two-handed body punching, and deserved the decision.

FEATHER-WEIGHT

S. Hynes (Connacht) beat T. J. Elliot (Ulster).

Hynes went straight for his man from the start, and, keeping up the aggression, he put Elliot on the ropes in the third round. Elliot had taken a lot of punishment, and was inclined to hold. He was "out" on his feet in the fifth round, but stood up gallantly. This fight was the best exhibition of the night. Elliot just refused to be knocked out.

LIGHT-WEIGHT

Sean Clancy (Connacht) beat J. Lytle (Ulster).

Clancy used his left with great advantage in the opening rounds, which were tame and marred by continuous clinches. In the fourth round Lytle went down from a right cross, but was on his feet again like a flash. Clancy was far too fast for the Ulster lad in a one-sided bout, and was an easy winner.

WELTER-WEIGHT

W. Gallagher (Ulster) beat W. Meehan (Connacht) on technical k.o.

This contest was fast and furious while it lasted. Gallagher hammered Meehan around the ring until the second round, when the referee stopped the fight, the Ulster lad being declared the winner.

MIDDLE-WEIGHT

M. J. O'Connor (Connacht) beat J. Carlisle (Ulster).

Carlisle was too strong for O'Connor, and in the first round forced him back with a hurricane of punches. O'Connor excelled in body-punching, and in the third round he sent in some grand rights. The fifth round opened with fireworks, the men standing toe-to-toe and exchanging punches, O'Connor sustaining a bad cut over the right eye. Carlisle, it was learned afterwards, was fighting with a broken nose.

LIGHT-HEAVY-WEIGHT

R. Hearns (Connacht) beat M. Marshall (Ulster).

Hearns sized his man up in the first round, which was fought at a fast pace, with Hearns having the better of the argument, doing some telling punching. In the fourth round Hearns made a furious onslaught, and Marshall took heavy punishment. Hearns continued to have the better of it, and was a good winner.

HEAVY-WEIGHT

D. Lydon (Connacht) beat J. McNeill (Ulster).

McNeill rushed wildly at Lydon in the opening round, but was steadied with a right hook. In the second round McNeill was still swinging wild right punches, which never connected. Lydon landed out punishment with his right, and McNeill kept lying on. In the third round both men loosened up and swapped punches freely. Lydon's win gave Connacht the Duggan Shield for the first time in the history of the competition.

SCORES LEVEL AT AUCKLAND

SMALL FIRST INNINGS' LEAD FOR M.C.C.

AUCKLAND, Friday.

Moderate batting by the earlier men—and the failure of a long tail—produced a total of only 205 for the M.C.C. first innings—22 better than the Auckland total. Batting for the second time, Auckland made exactly the 22 needed to draw level for the loss of two wickets. Wyatt, with 56, including four boundaries, was the M.C.C. top scorer, he and Worthington putting on 96 for the first wicket before Wyatt was caught at short forward leg by the Auckland captain, Postles. Hardstaff made 51, for which he batted 86 minutes, and hit five boundaries, but none of the others accomplished anything. Score:—

AUCKLAND—First Innings, 183 (P. E. Whitelaw 99 not out; Verity 4 for 61, Copson 3 for 17).

NEWMARKET HINTS FOR TO-DAY

Newmarket stables will be well represented at Alexandra Park. In the Priory Selling Handicap I look to who will be all the better for her Lincoln race, to win. The Juvenile Selling Plate may be won by

MAIDEN VENTURE.

We shall have about half a dozen runners for the Enfield Plate. I plump for the well-galloped

PORTER (nap).

Shalfleet and Ballywellbroke, two very smart sprinters, will be seen out for the London Sprint Handicap, and I prefer both to Slap and Tickle. On her best form, Eta would be considered to hold a big winning chance. I select

BALLYWELLBROKE.

In the Alexandra Handicap Sedgemoor will be suited by the track, but I prefer

BINGHAM (next best).

JACK PETERSEN RETIRES

INJURY TO EYES BRINGS CAREER TO AN END

Jack Petersen, former British and Empire heavy-weight champion, yesterday stated that he has definitely decided to retire from the ring. Petersen, who is twenty-five years old, has in recent months been suffering with eye injuries. The verdict of the specialist, whom he saw in London on Thursday, that the damage to his eyes, suffered in some of his greatest fights, necessitated him wearing glasses, spelt the end of Petersen's boxing career.

Last night he was giving an exhibition at Llandrindod Wells for charity, "and that," he said, "I am afraid will be my last appearance in the boxing ring."

Petersen began his ring career as an amateur, and a few months after he had won the A.B.A. heavy-weight title at the Royal Albert Hall, London, in March, 1931, he turned professional. Less than a year later he won the British cruiser-weight championship from Harry Crossley, of Mexborough.

In July, 1932, he won the British heavy-weight title when he knocked out Reggie Meen in the second round at Wimbledon, and although he lost the honour to Len Harvey in November of the following year, he regained it seven months later by beating Harvey. He held the title for a long time afterwards, and it came as a surprise when, at Leicester, he again lost the title, this time to Ben Foord, who held it until quite recently.

Petersen's last big fight was against Walter Neusel, the German, who for the second time defeated the Welshman.

On each occasion Neusel punished Petersen severely, and Petersen received cuts on the eyes.

SNOOKER

P. J. O'CONNOR BEATS NORTHERN CHAMPION

P. J. O'Connor, Free State champion, had no difficulty in beating J. Hillis, Northern Ireland champion, at Belfast last night. This is the fourth consecutive year for a Free State snooker champion to defeat the Northern holder. The contest was the best of seven frames, and O'Connor won the first four, and eventually gained victory by 6-1.

To-night the Northern and Southern champions will meet at billiards.

CUP FINALISTS AT WATERFORD

LEAGUE LEADERS' VISIT TO DUNDALK

Free State Cup finalists, Waterford and St. James's Gate, will provide the leading attraction of the week-end, and as the Cup final will be played in Dublin their meeting to-morrow at Kilcohan Park, Waterford, should draw the biggest local crowd of the season.

Well in the running for second place in the League, Waterford cannot afford to lose even a point, but their form in their recent games points to the probability of their stabilising their position in this match.

Cork, who played Brideville yesterday, meet Bohemians to-day at Dalymount Park, at 3 o'clock. Bohemians have Wilson on the injured list, but J. Nolan comes back into goal. There are no changes among the forwards, who will likely provide the Southerners' defence with plenty to do.

Sligo Rovers are not playing as well together as in the first round. They, in fact, are causing their supporters many anxious moments; but Dundalk had an unusually busy Easter, and many be feeling its effects against the leaders to-morrow at Dundalk. The question of relegation (so-called) enters into the match at Milltown, where Shamrock Rovers are at home to Brideville, and it also crops up in the match between Bray Unknowns and Shelbourne at Bray. It should be a good game at Tolka Park between Dolphin and Drumcondra.

BRIDEVILLE LOSE INTERVAL LEAD

CORK ..... 3 BRIDEVILLE 2

Cork and Brideville, the two bottom teams in the Free State League, met at Shelbourne Park yesterday, the game resulting in a win for Cork, who had been a goal in arrears at the interval.

Thompson gave Cork the lead after twenty minutes, but seven minutes later Bird equalised, and the same player put Brideville in front before half-time.

Midway through the second half Ring scored for Cork, who got the winning goal through Byrne fifteen minutes from the end.

Brideville—Kennedy; Meek, Lennox; Fennell, Wall, Byrne; Gill, Reid, Jackson, Bird, Casey.

Cork—Harrington; Mahoney, Mullen; Murphy, Little, Connolly; Thompson, Marshall, Byrne, Cronin, Ring.

THE MOTOR TRADERS' LEAGUE

To-day the Motor Traders' League will hold a benefit match in aid of the League Injured Players' Fund, at Harold's Cross Park. The Lord Mayor will kick-off at 3.30.

Whites—Montgomery (Huet's); Banks (do.), Cooke (Lincoln and Nolan); Byrne (Smithfield), Lynch (Buckley's), Harty (Tracy's); Wall (Smithfield), Kelly (Raleigh), Murphy (Lincoln and Nolan), Cummins (Tracy's), Curran (Smithfield). Reserves—Salmon and Fox.

Colours—G. Massey (Lucas); O'Connor (Tracy's, capt.), Clery (Dunlop's); Tormey (Doyle's), King (Huet's), Atkins (Buckley's); Quinn (do.), Ryan (Dunlop's), Kennedy (Buckley's), Dawson (Lincoln and Nolan), Brooks (do.). Reserves—Gill and Byrne.

BANK OF IRELAND HIGHER

IMPERIAL TOBACCO DULL

Interest on the Dublin Stock Exchange yesterday was mainly confined to evening-up transactions in connection with the three weeks' account, and consequently movements were irregular

Active conditions prevailed among the Free State Funds, and the tone was steady to firm. War Loan, after a firm start, eased later to 102⅞.

Banks enjoyed support, and Bank of Ireland Stock gained a point, while Nationals moved up to 53s. 6d.

Guinness further improved to 138s. 9d., but Dublin Distillers "A" eased to 3s.

Cable issues displayed a weak appearance in nominal figures.

Great Southern Rails were firmer, apart from the Guaranteed, which on some selling relapsed 27s. 6d. to 78½.

Dublin Trams inclined higher, and Alliance Gas Ord moved up to 35s. 9d.

Irish American Oil Pref. added a few pence, but Carroll Ord and Independent "B" Ord. shaded off. Irish Cinema Ord. firmed up to 4s. 4½d.

Imperial Tobaccos encountered heavy selling and relapsed 2s. 3d. to 152s. 9d. B.A.T. Ord. advanced to 125s. 3d. Coats Ord. rose to 49s. 6d., but Courtaulds drooped to 51s.

"Emmies," Ford Motors, Unilever issues and Imperial Chemicals all showed an easier trend.

LONDON FLAT

MINING ISSUES DULL

Chief interest on the London Stock markets yesterday was directed to Cable and Wireless stocks, following the capital reduction proposals. The Preference stock developed strength on the proposed funding of dividend arrears, but both the "A" and "B" issues were quoted at appreciably reduced rates. Business generally was on small lines owing to the arrangement of preliminary carry-over facilities, and unfavourable overnight Wall street advices and further sales from Paris produced a rather dull tone. Sharp falls in the Kaffir group reflected reports of labour troubles on the Rand, and nervous selling by speculators caused weakness in Rhodesian Copper and other base metal shares. A late improvement was witnessed in the Gilt-edged section, but Industrials, apart from a few isolated features, lacked support and were mostly lower on end account selling.

BRITISH FUNDS.

Extremely quiet conditions characterised the Gilt-edged market at first, but several issues tended to harden, and when modest investment demand arose during the afternoon quotations soon responded. Consols Fours gained ¼ to 109⅜, while War Loan, Locals, and a number of others put on ¼.

FOREIGN BONDS.

The bulk of transactions in Foreign Bonds resulted from liquidation, and among Europeans Germans became dull and declines occurred in Czechoslovakia Bonds and Greek Sevens. In Far Easterns Chinese went better, while Far Easterns lost ground. South Americans were subdued, with Brazilians maintaining a firm tendency.

RAILS.

In the British Rail section Southerns gave way on the Battersea smash, the Prefd. dropping to 89½. L.N.E. issues also made a poor showing, but L.M.S. moved up to 29½ and other stocks kept steady. Foreign Rails were unsettled by persistent selling and an all-round set-back was witnessed in the Argentine group, where Central Argentines were particularly flat. Colonial and American Rails also remained out of favour and closed lower.

INDUSTRIALS.

The latest company news was responsible for moderate buying of selected Industrial issues, but fresh demand was usually offset by end-account realisations, and in consequence the market as a whole presented a neglected appearance. Cable stocks were an active feature, and in the Iron and Steel section Hadfields advanced on the accounts and Indian Iron scored a fresh rise. Sudan Plantations enjoyed sustained support and other issues which attracted favourable attention included Swedish Match "B" and Turner and Newalls. Further declines were the rule in Transatlantics, and some of the leading Brewery and Shipping issues came back smartly.

MINES.

The Mining departments opened on a dull note and throughout the session the leading counters were on the down grade owing to liquidation. Kaffirs were offered on local Cape and Paris account, and, as selling from the last-named centre assumed fairly large proportions, dealers lowered prices throughout the list. "Johnnies" were notably weak and heavy losses were sustained by East Rand, Western Reefs and West Wits. Diamond shares displayed little of their recent cheerfulness, and in the Rhodesian group Roans fell back by a substantial amount and other leaders weakened. Tin shares participated in the downward movement and recessions were the rule in West African and Westralian issues.

THE INDUSTRIAL MARKET

CABLE CAPITAL PLAN EFFECT

Although bright spots were not lacking in the Industrial market yesterday end-account realisations again caused irregularity in price movements. Adverse advices from Wall street had a depressing effect on Trans-atlantics, which finished with a weak appearance in the late dealings.

Dealers in Cable and Wireless issues regarded the capital reconstruction scheme with rather mixed feelings. The Preference stock responded to the proposal to fund the arrears of dividend, and closed 1¼ up at 113⅜, having touched 114½ at one time. The two junior issues, however, declined sharply, the "A" Ordinary closing 2 down at 27½, and the "B" Ordinary 2½ down at 6½, after dipping to 6⅜.

While the Iron and Steel section as a whole was quiet, a strong feature was again provided by Indian Iron, the result of the day's business being an advance of ½. Another strong spot was Hadfields.

An irregular tendency characterised Electrical Equipments. English Electric were in moderate request, and improved 6d.

Motor issues again presented a neglected appearance, and a generally easier tone prevailed.

The Aircraft section was neglected, and price changes were of little importance.

BREWERIES IRREGULAR.

There was some irregularity among Breweries owing to a little end-account profit-taking. Distillers were noticeably affected, and lost 2s 6d Support was noticeable for Guinness, which finished 6d. to the good.

In the Tobacco section Carreras continued in favour, other shares being maintained.

There was some support for John Barker in the Stores section, and the shares rose 1s. 3d.

Provision and Catering shares had a rather irregular appearance. International Tea further improved. Unilevers, however, remained on the dull side.

Among Textiles, Coats came in for inquiry, but Sewing Cottons receded. In the Rayons, Courtaulds fell back 6d. British Enkas had a dull appearance.

Most of the interest in the Land section again centred around Sudans, which further improved 1s. 6d. to 57s. 3d.

In the Shipping section Clan Lines, Indo-Chinas, Cunards and Furness Withy were firm spots.

Few changes of note occurred in the Miscellaneous section, and an irregular tone prevailed throughout. British Oxygens were subject to end-account profit-taking, and Turner and Newall finished the turn lower. The General Refractories meeting continued to have a good effect on the shares, which put on another 9d. to 32s., but Dunlops, on the other hand, closed the turn easier at 37s. 3d., on a little profit-taking following their recent rise.

PARIS AGAIN SELLS OILS

A steady start in the Oil Share Market yesterday was attributed mainly to the fact that small buying orders were received from the Continent. Later, however, French operators turned sellers, realisations being on a considerably larger scale than the early purchases. Consequently the prices of international counters gave way rather sharply, this being particularly noticeable in Shells, Royal Dutch and Mexican Eagles. The rest of the market became dull in sympathy.

RUBBERS LOWER

A further decline to 1s. 0¾d. per lb. in the price of raw rubber, due to speculative sales following the news that shipments of the commodity from Malaya in March were heavier than expected, reduced interest in Rubber shares yesterday to negligible proportions, and prompted some operators to secure profits. From the outset the market was inclined to droop, but liquidation was confined mainly to a number of recent favourites, and, therefore, dealers were satisfied to leave the majority of issues unchanged. A fresh loss of 1s. 3d. in Kuala Lumpur was the chief movement, but Malacca, Telegoredjo, United Sua Betong and Rubber Trust also finished dull. It is estimated that United Kingdom rubber stocks have declined by 1,525 tons during the past week.

AMERICAN FINANCIAL NOTES

REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.

THE SCRAP SITUATION.

A number of the smaller independent steel companies has organised the "Independent Steel and Iron Producers' Committee on Scrap," with a view to studying the scrap situation. The committee may ultimately centralise the buying of scrap metal.

The first reversal of the recent strong upward trend of scrap prices was reported yesterday with a sale of 20,000 tons of heavy melting steel scrap at Pittsburgh at 23.50 dollars per ton—a decline of 50 cents per ton.

LOADINGS OF REVENUE FREIGHT.

Statistics issued by the American Railway Association show that loadings of revenue freight for the week ended March 27 totalled 761,100 cars. This represents an increase of 1,800 cars compared with the previous week, and an increase of 160,600 cars against the corresponding week of last year.

SALES OF LOAN COTTON.

Mr. Jesse Jones, Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, in announcing yesterday that the programme for the disposal of loan cotton would continues through April, stated: "The marketing programme for the 12 cents loan cotton will be continued through April, subject to change in price terms and conditions of five days' notice."

VISCOE CORPORATION.

The Viscoe Corporation has advanced the price of its 150 denier 40 filament yarn from 60 cents to 63 cents per lb. The increase takes effect from April 1.

TO-DAY'S COMPANY ANNOUNCEMENT.

The American Waterworks and Electric Company reports for 1936 a net profit of 4,750,000 dollars (equal to 1.58 dollars per share), compared with 3,494,000 (1.32 dollars) for 1935.

MILLAR AND BEATTY, LTD.

The annual general meeting of Messrs. Millar and Beatty, Ltd., was held at 14 Grafton street, Dublin, yesterday, when a further increase in the company's business for the year ending 31st January, 1937, was reported. Payment of a final dividend on the Preference capital at the rate of five per cent. per annum was confirmed, an increased dividend was declared upon the Ordinary shares, and appreciation of the services of the staff was expressed.

THE MONEY MARKET

TREASURY BILL RATE HIGHER

Applications were received at the Bank of England for £45,000,000 Treasury bills. Tenders dated Monday to Saturday of next week at £99 17s. 3d. received about 50 per cent., above in full. The average rate indicated is about 10s. 7½d. per cent., compared with just under 10s. per cent. for last week's bills.

Money in Lombard street yesterday was still in good demand at ½ p.c., while the tendency of bill rates was rather firmer. The general quotation for short bills was ¾ p.c. to ⅞ p.c., while ⅞ p.c. was the minimum rate for fine three months' paper.

Bank Rate Discount (changed June 30, 1932), 2% (60 days fine) ..... ½ | 9/16 %
4 months ..... 9/16 % | Trade ..... 2½ %
6 ..... 5/8 % | " ..... 2¾ 2½ %
Loans to Brokers Day to-day ..... 2½ 3 %
" for a week ..... ½ %
Deposit Allowances; Banks at Call ..... ½ %
" Discount Houses at Call ..... ½ %
" " at Notice ..... ¾ %

The price of gold was fixed ½d. higher at 142s. 11½d. per fine ounce.

Silver was unchanged at 20½d. per ounce for spot and 20¾d. for forward delivery.

In the Foreign Exchange market yesterday the dollar rallied sharply in the initial dealings, and though a reaction occurred later in the day, closing quotations, nevertheless, revealed a slight net movement in favour of New York. The franc passed its most erratic day for some time past. The French authorities relaxed control upon the sterling-franc rate during the early dealings and for a period fairly wide movements occurred. Subsequently the demand was renewed, and shortly before the close the Paris control re-established its hold over the market to resist the rising trend of the franc. Continental currencies generally attracted little interest.
